AGE PENSIONS BIG ISSUE AT UTAH MEETING

Insurance Fund to Which

12 STATES PAY AGED
Governors Discuss Issue Regarded as Socialistic
Twenty Years Ago

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1930 by Post Pub. Co.
Salt Lake City—(CPA)—Twenty years ago it would have been regarded as Socialistic for public officials to discuss old age pensions.
Today the governors of the several states in formal conference assembled not only to review what nine states have done in the short space of three years but to chart the course of an even broader helpfulness to the workers who, industry says, have in many instances outlived their usefulness when just past middle age.

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, who recently signed an old age pension law affecting men and women of 70 years or over, made the principal address, which was followed by a round table discussion.
Twelve states in all have laws for the relief of the aged; namely, Montana, Nevada, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Colorado, Maryland, California, Minnesota, Utah, Wyoming, Massachusetts and New York. All but the last two were passed prior to 1920 and credits for definite service to be paid under certain regulations, but New York first-Massachusetts stipulated that each case is to be handled on its merits. The usual age in all 12 states is between 65 and 70. Some states assist the counties, others give the counties the option of assuming the obligation.

The particular point raised Monday was whether the states should encourage the establishment of an insurance fund to which workers would regularly contribute a part of their salaries, so that as old age or unemployment came on there would be definite protection.

INSTITUTIONS CROWDED
In a sense the old age relief arises from the overcrowded condition of state institutions and the discovery that the states are under heavy expense to care for the indigent and that the pension cannot very well be avoided from the standpoint of the tax burden unless it is scientifically tackled in the early years.

Naturally the discussion of old age pensions afforded an opportunity to talk of unemployment, for with the mechanization of industry and competition between services the so-called technological unemployment has been increasing. Hence again unemployment as a result of the present business depression and unemployment due to fundamental causes not easily overcome were analyzed by the governors, with some implicit remarks about the economic ideas of the Hoover administration thrown in, as is to be expected from a mixed gathering of Democratic and Republican government touches on the issues of the day.

With respect to unemployment,
there was comment about the need for careful planning of public works, the possibility of a greater spread of employment through a five-day week and the need for accurate data on the number of people really out of work.

Last year Governor Roosevelt dropped a bombshell in the Government conference at New London by reading a letter to Chairman Wickersham of the national commission on law enforcement, suggesting that the states assume full responsibilities in handling the administrative side of prohibition. This year the topic given him not only old age pensions but unemployment, had the opportunity to discuss Republican prosperity.

Says Efforts In Treasury Not Sincere

For Repeal "Before Nation
Is Consumed by Fires of Consequences"

Washington—(AP)—Representative
Collier, Democrat, New York, today introduced a resolution calling for an investigation by the house judiciary committee of charges made by Maurice Campbell, retiring New York prohibition administrator.

New York—(AP)—Major Maurice Campbell, until today prohibition administrator for New York, advocates the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.
He resigned when ordered to Boston to take charge of alcohol permits under the reorganization of the prohibition forces which transferred enforcement to the department of justice.
His declaration of repeal of the eighteenth amendment was part of a statement published today in which he charged that his transfer to Boston resulted from refusal to grant or restore brewery, whiskey and alcohol permits which "local politicians and certain administration officials in Washington feel must be restored to secure necessary support for the Republican ticket in New York this fall."

Referring to William B. Moss who has been transferred from the post of prohibition administrator at Albany, N. Y., to take charge of alcohol permits in New York, Campbell said:

"Possibly officials in Washington think he can move easily away from himself. I do not know. But I now publicly admonish him to get together all his strength to withstand the onslaught for I am sure he will have need for all his ability and courage he can command."
"OFFICIALS NOT SINCERE"
"And now, after four years as one of the highest field officials in prohibition enforcement, with three of that time as administrator in New York, I publicly declare that certain treasury officials who have been charged with enforcement of the national prohibition act, and who are still to remain in charge of kin-dered activities, have not been sincere in their efforts to enforce this law."

"Further, in New York and other areas in which the sentiment of the people is predominantly wet, this transfer of enforcement activities to the department of justice will mean nothing so long as prohibition prosecutions are left to United States attorneys who possess political ambitions, the success of which must

Gunman Wanted In Lingle Killing Nabbed In Chicago

BE SHADOWED VICTIM DAY OF SLAYING

Three Additional Arrests
Made in Two Other
Raids by Officers

BULLETIN
Los Angeles.—(P)—Frank Foster, wanted in the Chicago killing of Jake Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, is under arrest here. Police Detective Captain Joe Taylor announced today the much-hunted man was arrested last night and placed incommunicado in the city jail.

Chicago.—(P)—One of the men particularly sought in the Lingle murder case, walked unsuspecting and unexpected into the arms of the law last night.
He is Grover Dullard. They say he is a gunman, a beer peddler and a "bug" Moran gangster. But what they say with especial pertinence is that he is the man who trailed Jake Lingle, Tribune reporter, on the day Lingle was slain, and that he "put the finger" on Lingle—pointed him out to the man who actually fired the murder bullet.

It may even develop, detectives intimated, that Dullard provided the short-barreled .38 calibre revolver the assassin dropped beside the reporter's body.

Dullard was arrested with eight others, including a young woman, in a raid by state's attorney's men on the loop headquarters of the "Moran mob."

Dullard was not present when the officers entered. He walked in while the raid was in progress. The officers, police said, are the "pay-off" headquarters for the Moran men.

MAKE OTHER RAIDS
Another raid was made a few minutes afterward on a room in the Commonwealth hotel on the north side. Two men were arrested. A third raid, resulted in the arrest of Jack Zula, known as the operator of a string of west side resorts, and as a recent ally of George (Bugs) Moran.

The police policy of "action, not talk" prevented newspapermen from obtaining full information as to the purposes of the several arrests—there were 15 altogether—but the officers gave reporters the impression that information vital to the Lingle inquiry was expected from some of those seized.

Officials indicated "that their investigation had brought forth substantial evidence of rumors which named Lingle" as attempting to "shut down" the operators of the Sheridan Wave Gambling club, promising them police protection in return for certain sums.

According to the account as told to the authorities, Lingle demanded 75 per cent of the gambling house profits.

MILWAUKEE ALDERMEN TO ATTEND BYRD DINNER

Milwaukee.—(P)—Several Milwaukee aldermen planned today to accept the invitation of Chicagoans to the dinner there in honor of Commander Richard B. Byrd, July 11. Cornelius Corcoran, president of the city council, read the letter of invitation in council meeting and there was enthusiasm until the mention of a charge of $6 per plate for the dinner. When he asked how many were going no hand was raised. Later, however, Aldermen Matt Mueller and John John led a group in signing for the event.

TEACHERS TAKE PLANES TO DISTANT CLASSES

New York.—(P)—A new experiment in education, the first airplane extension course, will be inaugurated this fall by New York university. Educational experts, traveling in a plane which may be the beginning of a fleet, will visit towns in New York, Massachusetts, Delaware, and Maryland to give instruction to teachers in grade and high schools. Outstanding educators will be carried to remote places where teachers and administrative officers in public schools may consult on the latest methods of instruction.

"We have made a thorough investigation of the hazards involved in air program," said Dean J. W. Withers of the school of education, "and have concluded that travel by air is safe."

Regular schedules for the extension courses of the "flying university" will be mapped.

LUTHERAN CHURCH TO HAVE SUMMER SCHEDULE

Beginning Sunday, July 6, First English Lutheran congregation will hold its services at 8:30 in the morning instead of 10:30, the usual hour. This schedule of early services will prevail during July and August.

The congregation will hold its second quarterly meeting Sunday, July 13, immediately after the morning service. Officers of the church and various organizations will submit reports.

The regular monthly meeting of the church council will take place at 7:30 Tuesday night at the church. Routine business will be transacted.

LITTLE HARM DONE WHEN TRAIN HITS LOAD OF EXPLOSIVES

Missoula, Mont.—(P)—A carnival train rushing down on Bear Mouth crossing today, found a truck of high explosive standing in its path.
Carl Siria had driven it onto the track but was unable to drive it off again. The rushing train attended to that detail for him. The engine sheared the truck in halves. Cases of explosive all intact, rained down upon the spot where many a road agent laid in ambush years ago.
As 200 passengers congratulated themselves, Siria crawled from the debris with a slight scratch on his head.

CITY COMMITTEE PROBES NIGHT TO DECIDE ON LIGHT

Nocturnal Investigation Results in Recommendations

Like the conspirators plotting for Caesar's life the night before the Ides of March they waited for darkness to fall. They gathered in front of city hall at 8 o'clock, but the nocturnal veil fell slowly and it was after 9 before they could start on their mission. The jet black shadows of night were necessary to cover their tour through the streets of Appleton.

Shrouded in darkness, the street lighting committee poked here and there from 9 o'clock until almost midnight, determining where there was need for additional street lights. Formerly inspection trips of the street lighting committee were made during the daytime, but several months ago someone pointed out the futility of judging the need for lights in daylight. Ever since that time Chairman W. H. Vanderheyden has been waiting for an auspicious night to take his committee here and there under cover of darkness.

The committee recommended the placement of a light at the corner of Pierce-ave and Third-st and one on Parkway-blvd. The request for lights on Calumet-st and W. Winnebago-st were held up until fall as it was felt that considerable money could be saved by not installing them during the summer, when street lighting is not as essential as in winter. The request of Irving Zuelke for an ornamental light in front of his new building was not discussed, as Mr. Zuelke failed to appear before the committee.

Brussels.—(P)—The king and queen of the Belgians today left for a visit in Switzerland. At Luzerne, they will receive a visit from the Princess Marie-Jose of Piedmont, bride of Prince Humbert of Italy, who is said to be expecting an heir.

NEW DAM IS RAPIDLY NEARING COMPLETION

The sluice sections on the new government dam at Rapid Croche on the Fox river near Kimberly have been completed and work is now being centered about the spillways, according to A. F. Everett, government engineer. Four sluice gates, each 20 feet wide have been installed, and operate by electric motors. It is expected the entire dam will be ready for use by the end of the navigation season, according to Mr. Everett.

40 SCOUTS SIGN FOR SECOND CAMP PERIOD

Forty valley council boy scouts have signed for the second period at Camp Chicagami, July 7 to 13, according to M. G. Clark, valley scout executive. The youngsters are from Troops 2, 6, 8, 10, 12, 20, 21, and 23. Thirty-eight youngsters are encamped at Chicagami this week.

OUTLET TO SEA HELD BIG NEED FOR MIDWEST

Cheaper to Ship from Coast to Coast Than from Middle Area, Claim

Salt Lake City.—(P)—Development of the Mississippi valley system of waterways, to give the farmer of the midwest an outlet to the sea, was urged by Gov. Arthur J. Weaver, Nebraska, in an address before the Salt Lake Rotary club here today.

Governor Weaver with other governors gathered here for their national conference, addressed the club during a program that was broadcast over a national radio hook-up of the National Broadcasting company.
"Because we must maintain our high standards of living on the farms of America, we must seek every possible economy in marketing and distribution of farm products," Governor Weaver said. "The transportation problem of the western farmer has become especially acute because of the increased cost of construction, maintenance and operation of railroads following the war. It is therefore necessary to find a cheaper means of transportation for bulk commodities produced and used in the great agricultural belt."

CANAL HELPS COASTS
Building of the Panama canal, the Nebraska executive declared, has shortened the distance between the Atlantic and Pacific coast so that "it costs the middleman from two to three times as much to ship to either coast as it does to ship from one coast to the other." This is reflected in correspondingly increased difficulties to meet competition from other sections, he added.

"The west pays the freight on its raw materials to eastern industrial centers and the freight back on the finished products," he said. "We pay wages and profits to workers and manufacturers who buy foods from other sections and invest their money in other places. We help to pay taxes of towns, cities and states not our own."

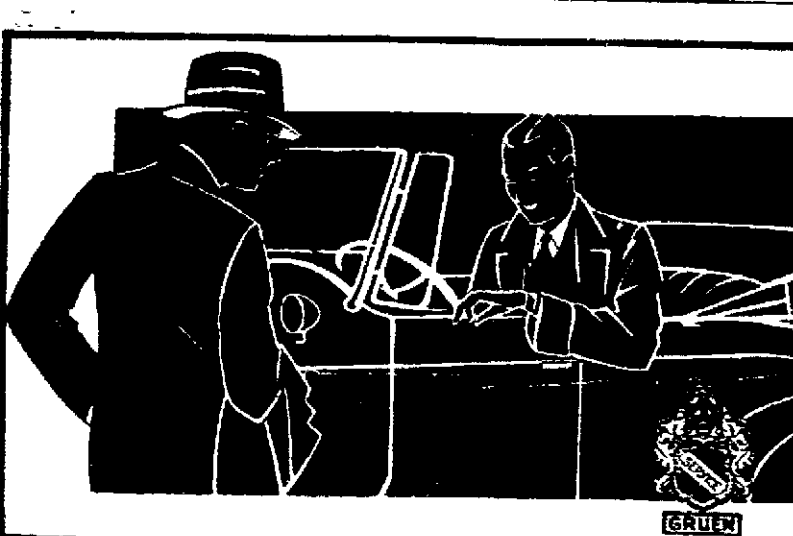

Development of the Mississippi valley waterway, he suggested not alone would solve this freight rate problem of the midwest, but also could be made to meet the needs of flood control, through governing the flow of water from the upper basin. "This same waterway could be transformed from an agent of destruction to one of beneficence by placing it upon the lands that need it and withholding it from areas now periodically flooded."

HOTEL GUESTS ROUTED BY DRUG STORE FLAMES

Milwaukee.—(P)—Seventeen fire companies responded to two alarms to extinguish a fire in a drug store in the heart of the business district today. The fire, sent up such a cloud of smoke that guests in two nearby hotels started down fire escapes before they discovered it was not in their lodging places. Many of them remained on the steel structures to watch the fire fighting. Damage to the drug stock in the basement and first floor was heavy.

RECORD EARTH SHOCKS

New York.—(P)—Two slight earthquake shocks were recorded last night on the seismograph of Fordham university. The first shock was at 8:17 p. m., E. S. T., and the second at 8:23. The distance was 2,960 miles from New York.

Great Activity Among 4-H Clubs Last Week; Many Will Enter Contest

Considerable activity was in progress among the 4-H clubs of the county during the last week it is indicated in the reports of meetings received during the week at the office of Gus Sell, county agent.

The reports were sent in from clubs which are planning to take part in the activities contest for 4-H clubs being sponsored by the county agricultural department and the Appleton Post-Crescent. Each month for four months the Post-Crescent will award cash prizes of $5, $2 and $1 to the clubs reporting the largest number of work while activities.

Awards will be made on the basis of reports following every event or meeting on a monthly basis, or summary of the previous activities. The contest for June closes on June 30 and all reports for June activities must be sent to Mr. Sell on or before July 10. Prize winners for June will be announced on July 17. Mr. Sell, Miss Harriet Thompson, county home demonstration agent, and representatives of the Post-Crescent will judge the entries.

Parents of the Willing Workers 4-H club were visitors at a meeting of the club at the home of Miss Laura Riehl. One hour of the meeting was spent in sewing work and another hour was spent in recreation. The lunch committee served ice cream and cake after the meeting according to Miss Hildegard Piechocki, reporter.

Members of the Wide Awake Forward club made plans for a picnic, at a meeting last week, to which the Medina and Hortonville clubs will be invited as guests. Fifteen members were present at this meeting. The next meeting of the club will be held July 2 when Miss Harriet Thompson, county leader, will attend. Four members of this club, Misses Marjorie Culbertson, Ethel Meldam, Dolores Anderson and Ethel Scott, gave a demonstration of the use of a first aid kit. Miss Marie Klein, county nurse, has been directing the club members in their study of first aid work and several members plan to stage the first aid demonstration at the county fair.

Fenton Gardner was elected treasurer of the Seymour Calf club at its meeting last week at the home of Emory Gardner. The club decided that it would charge dues of 5 cents at each meeting in the future.

Seven members were present at a meeting of the Golden Hill 4-H club last week. Miss Harriet Thompson, county leader, and her mother, were guests. The next meeting will be held July 16.

Helene Van Gompel and Martha Van Dera were in charge of the program at the meeting of the Cherry Hill 4-H club last week. Mrs. J. Van Asten, club leader urged all members to try to show improvement over their previous projects in the completion of a new piece of work. Members of the club displayed the garment bags and pet pillows, on which they have been working, and decided to make an apron next. The next meeting of the club was scheduled for June 30 with Bertha Van Dera and Elizabeth Weyenberg in charge of the program.

Nine members attended a meeting of the Sunnyside Sewing club at the home of the leader, Miss Marcela Gagnow. The members decided to

FOUR MORE BODIES ARE TAKEN FROM TRAIN WRECK

Sudbury, Ont.—(P)—The bodies of a man and three children were taken today from the flooded coaches of a derailed passenger train, bringing to 15 the number of victims of two railroad accidents near Sudbury last Thursday. Both wrecks were caused by washouts in a severe storm which swept the district.

The children had been reported missing, but the finding of the man's body occasioned surprise, as it was thought all the passengers had been accounted for. The body was identified as that of Ben O'Connell of Lloyminster, Sask.

Four children were killed or drowned in the wreck of the passenger train, which, with Giles, made 25 victims, and ten persons were killed in a wreck of a freight train, and others all were itinerant workers heading their way to the wheat harvest fields.

There's no "sweet sorrow" in this parting

WHEN there are not enough lamps in the house somebody is always sure to be robbing one socket to fill another.

And that never helps to promote peace or establish concord.

The light a man needs while he is brushing his hair and putting on his tie doesn't cost two cents a month.

Fussing over himself is no treat to him. He spends little time in front of his mirror, but he wants light there when he wants it.

No wonder those empty sockets cause him to develop a temper and make remarks that have a tendency to spoil the day.

Why not buy your lamps by the carton, so that you will not have to go around borrowing from sockets where light is sure to be needed?

Good light for bedrooms

It is as important to have good light in bedrooms as in other parts of a home. An overhead light in the bedroom is a convenience that is provided for in carefully designed modern houses and apartments.

In addition to the overhead light there should be enough wall brackets to have lamps on both sides of dressers, highboys, and dressing tables.

There should also be portable lamps in bedrooms, so that light may be provided wherever it is needed.

Light and life

Sight is the most important of the five senses, and should be guarded carefully. Where there is light there is progress. Darkness means stagnation.

Flowers bloom only in the light. Even a diamond will not sparkle in the dark.

Poor light destroys the lustre of beautiful eyes. Headache, nervousness, and other distressing ailments are often due to overstrained eyes.

If people could always have good light few of them would have poor sight.

When your sight is impaired you are seriously crippled.

Breaking shells with your teeth to save wear and tear on the nut-cracker is not as foolish as damaging your eyes to save light.

People may learn to eat with false teeth, but no one will ever be able to see with a glass eye.

This advertisement is published in the interest of a more beneficial use of electricity, and to inform you how to obtain the best lighting service for the current consumed.

City-Farm Cooperation Can Solve Economic Problem

RURAL GRANGE AND CITY CLUB EAT TOGETHER

Hear Former Farm Commissioner Urge Better Relationship

Interdependence between farm and city folk founded on friendliness and good will is fast being recognized as the only solution to the great economic and political problems of the United States, John D. Jones, Jr., Madison, former commissioner of agriculture in Wisconsin said in an address at a joint meeting of Appleton Grange and City Club Monday evening. A dinner preceded the meeting.

In a short address on What The Grange Is, Rudolph Schaefer, Greenville, urged cooperation between farm and city folk, and pointed out that it was the best way to foster friendships.

Special entertainment was provided by Robert M. Connelly and Martin Van Roy. Other entertainment was furnished by Ed. Meltz, xylophone soloist, accompanied by Vilas Gehlin, pianist.

NEED EACH OTHER
"Problems of the farmer and industrial worker in the city are interwoven and similar, and when both are complex, both the agriculturist and manufacturer suffer," Mr. Jones stated. "Few people realize that a farmer runs one of the most important manufacturing plants in the world, and that it wasn't for the farmer the world would starve."

"The recent decline in the dairy industry was not due to the farmer flooding the market with his products and over-doing himself in his own industry."

"The solution to the entire dairy problem is that 3,000,000 men were out of work the latter part of 1929, thus cutting down the consumption of dairy products and lessening the usage of cheap imitations. Warehouses and packing houses stacked up huge supplies of butter, cheese and other dairy products which were distributed only as the demand became evident."

BUY UP MORE
"The result was that farmers received 50 per cent less for their products than they did in 1927 and 1928. When the agriculturist became desperate and started flooding the market with their products, taking whatever they could for them in an almost desperate manner, the packing houses again saw their chance and brought up more for storage, thus making the situation even more complex," he stated.

Mr. Jones pointed out that if the farmer and city folk were to live in sympathy with each other, the problem would be greatly altered.

"The situation in Chicago where lawlessness and crime rules in politics as well as in the economics, there is no feeling of service to the world. The crime element knows nothing about the farmer who is furnishing them with food products."

"What we need is stability in government, politically and economically, so that this unwelcome element crime can be wiped out through an era of good feeling and understanding."

"The racketeers would find themselves as miserable, uninvited guests around the dinner table of the world, composed of true American citizens, and made up of friendly city and country folk."

"The peace and quietude of the farm would be rooted in the city as well and the great problems now confronting us in this economic depression would be solved," the speaker said.

Before leading up to the climax of his address, Mr. Jones traced the history of the old farmers, and pointed out the modes of peaceful living in the old days free from unrest and false political and economic movements.

DEPEND ON FARMER
"Many city folks are of the opinion that they are independent of the farmer, but they don't realize, many of them, that they are earning their wages in factories and manufacturing plants where farm machinery and implements are being made for the farmer who pays big prices for them."

"The farmer too has come to realize that he is dependent on the city folk. He knows that no longer is possible to grow his crops with the old styled implements if he is to do business on a larger scale," he said.

In concluding his speech, Mr. Jones urged that members of the club and grange hold more meetings similar to the Monday evening session.

A copy of "Wisconsin Facts" including a sheet of stamps, advertising the state was received yesterday by Kenneth Corbett, chamber of commerce secretary, from E. H. Krueger, general secretary of the Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce. Copies of the booklet are being sent to chambers and associations of commerce throughout the state.

The booklet and stamps have a dual purpose: to advertise the state by means of stamps and induce inquiries to come to the local chamber of commerce in cities from which the stamps are mailed, and to secure funds for advertising the state in newspapers and magazines.

MARRIAGE LICENSES
Two marriage licenses were issued Tuesday by John E. Hantschel, county clerk. They were given to Frank Maher, Jr. and Irene Kiley, Appleton; Victor Bolt, route 4, Appleton; and Linda Stohman, route 2, Appleton.

WATER LEVELS NOT AFFECTED BY RAINS

Rains of the past two weeks, including the heavy shower Sunday evening, had little effect on the levels of the Fox river and Lake Winnebago, according to A. F. Everett, government engineer.

Contrary to the opinions of many riparians, the levels of the river and lake are higher now than they were a year ago, the level of the lake being recorded at 10 inches above the crest of the Menasha dam, Mr. Everett stated.

UNITY CHIEF NEED, U. W. HEAD THINKS

World Must Have "Good Measure of Aim and Action," Kiwanis Told

Atlantic City, N. J.—(AP)—Unity between individuals, communities, states and nations today might be the panacea to solve the world's ills, President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin said in an address to delegates at the Kiwanis international convention here.

"If Kiwanis and kindred fellow worshippers are to be more than adventurers in back-slapping cordiality and business reciprocity," he said yesterday, "they must sink their roots in the soil of a sound philosophy of their social purpose. The very way in which its membership is selected and solidified suggests such a philosophy for Kiwanis. I give it one phrase: The quest of unity in the midst of diversity."

"We want unity in the world. It is impossible for individuals, communities, states, and nations to enjoy permanently and progressively great existence unless the world that holds them achieves a good measure of unity of aim and action. The fact is that the United States are not united. There are two Americas within our borders—an America that takes its cue from the city and an America that takes its cue from the country. And decade by decade the America that takes its cue from the city has consistently gained ground on the America that takes its cue from the country."

"If the Republican and Democratic parties are to meet, content with being merely optimistic of the future, the nation may resign itself to the increasing paralysis of statesmanship. I do not believe the American people will tolerate the increasing sterility of American politics."

"Rural Americans are adjusting themselves more slowly to the changes than their city brothers. It is the slowness of adjustment that is wrecking the two political parties to pieces and almost bringing the American government to a standstill."

"The agricultural part of America must organize as the rest of the American enterprise is organized or the farmer will be lost in the shuffle. He can not depend permanently upon being subsidized or nursed by the state and federal governments."

IDENTIFY LOOT TAKEN FROM APPLETON HOMES
Part of the $30,000 loot recovered by Minneapolis police with the arrest of J. C. Hart, Chicago, and LaVonne Baldauf, West Bend, in Minneapolis last Sunday, has been identified as having been stolen from Appleton homes. A gun and watch, the residence of L. J. Small, have been positively identified, according to Police Officer George T. Prim, who received a wire from Minneapolis Tuesday saying the loot was being taken to Oshkosh by the police chief of that city.

Hart has confessed more than 100 burglaries in the Fox river valley during the last few months and Chief Prim said that identification of the loot definitely proves that the man was responsible for the series of house burglaries in Appleton in the last two months.

BOY'S NOSE BROKEN BY HANDLE OF CAR WINDOW
Frank Austin, Jr., 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Austin, Sr., Little Chute, suffered a broken nose Sunday afternoon at his home when he was struck in the face by a steel handle of a window lift in an automobile. The window had been broken and the boy was turning on the handle and watching the lever inside the door when the spring suddenly broke and shot the lever up into his face.

RAINBOW VETS HAVE MEETING AT COTTAGE
Members of the Rainbow Veterans organization held a meeting at their cottage on Lake Winnebago Monday evening at which plans for use of the cottage were discussed. John E. Hantschel, secretary, was authorized to call a special meeting of the group for Monday evening, July 1, when the discussion will be continued.

GUARDS GETTING READY FOR CAMP
Packs were rolled and equipment prepared for transportation to Camp Douglas by members of Co. D., 127th Infantry, Wisconsin National Guard, at Monday evening's regular drill. The guardsmen go into camp Saturday leaving on the Soo Line at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Members of the 120th field artillery band also prepared for camp at their drill Monday evening. They go to Camp McCoy at Sparta and leave at 8:15 Saturday morning over the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. Both artillery and infantry units return to Appleton, Saturday, July 19.

Practically all of the 60 men in Co. D., are expected to attend camp. There still are several vacancies on the company roster and efforts will be made to make the company full strength by Saturday. Seven more men who want to attend camp are needed by the organization. Applications for enlistment can be made to Capt. Clyde P. Schroeder at the army any evening this week.

Governor's day will be observed Sunday, July 13, according to present plans and an elaborate program is being prepared. Capt. Schroeder has extended an invitation to all members of the company, and to city and county officials to attend camp and visit with the boys. Special rates are being offered by railroads which are running special trains to camp.

The feature of the instruction period for Co. D. this season will be a two-day maneuver at Sparta. The maneuver will take place Wednesday and Thursday of the last week of the encampment, the infantrymen all being transported to Sparta by reservation trains and then taking up positions for a theoretical battle.

Last year the organization won the best kitchen trophy for the second consecutive year and again have designs on the cup. The boys also won the machine gun combat firing honors for the brigade last summer for the second consecutive time and have already garnered gun crews to again bring home the banner.

"I live on Riverside drive myself. That makes us both big shots," the guard said sneeringly, as he wrote down "no home." "Charge?" "Proving," said the commissioner, smiling.

CYCLONE DAMAGE MOUNTS AS MORE REPORTS ARRIVE

Estimate Total Damage in This Part of State at $500,000

Damage from the cyclone that swept through this part of the Fox river valley early Sunday evening was found to be much greater Monday night and Tuesday than early reports Monday indicated, according to information received here today from various parts of Winnebago, Outagamie, Waupaca and Brown-co.

Crews of the Wisconsin Telephone company, Wisconsin Michigan Power company and of the various railroad companies were kept busy all day Monday and late Tuesday making repairs and getting means of communication and transportation back into shape.

Telephone company crews had cleared up most of the wire and pole trouble by Monday night and it was expected damage to cables would be repaired by Tuesday evening, according to F. N. Belanger, district manager of the phone company.

Power company employees also worked most of Monday night making repairs on lights and wires which went down under the heavy but short lived gale of Sunday evening. No reports of dead wires or lamps were received Monday evening, indicating that all necessary repairs had been completed, according to power company officials.

County highway crews also were kept busy clearing trees, branches and other debris from roads throughout Winnebago and Outagamie-co. In some cases where trees from three to four feet in diameter fell across the road, it was necessary to draft motor driven saws into action, it is reported.

It is estimated that 150 barns in Outagamie and neighboring counties were blown down and that the total loss probably aggregates between $500,000 and $600,000. Manitowoc-co also suffered heavy losses. At least 50 barns and 5 homes were destroyed by the hurricane.

Much heavier damage was caused to barns, trees and other farm buildings in Outagamie and Winnebago counties than was reported Monday, according to information received here Tuesday morning.

Many homes were damaged when heavy trees were torn out by the roots and hurled through roofs. Many wires and poles went down as heavy branches or trees fell over them.

Small sheds and farm equipment were set rolling over fields, through wires, running crops and littering the farm land with debris.

GROWTH OF MOTOR BUS TRAVEL SHOWS REGULATION NEED

Believe Expansion Will Bring Needed Laws Quicker
Than Any Other Means

BY J. C. ROYLE
Copyright 1930 By Coss Press
Washington (CPA)—Growth of bus transportation is having a more potent effect in promoting laws for the regulation of motor carriers than the efforts of members of the house and senate supporting such measures.

Whether the Couzens measure providing for interstate bus regulation is passed at this session of congress or not, men in the motor bus field believe some regulation is absolutely essential in the not distant future.
Some states exercise a partial regulation even in interstate traffic and many supervise intrastate operations, but there is a lack of uniformity in this regulation and some states feel they have no right to deal with interstate movement at all.

The total number of buses in operation today is approximately 95,000, of which about 35,000 are motor carriers, 18,000 electric railway buses and 42,000 school buses. The mileage of all regular bus routes is about 753,099 and common carriers in the bus field are expected to travel 1, 800,000,000 miles this year. This means the transportation of nearly 2,000,000,000 passengers.

MORE BUS TRAVEL

The number of passengers carried by motor coach lines since 1922 has shown a gain of 197 per cent, while the number carried by steam trains and electric surface lines has decreased 9 per cent for the first and 2 per cent for the second. The steam and street railways have not been slow to see this trend and they are increasing the number of buses they operate and establishing bus routes between stations formerly served exclusively by cars running over tracks.

The larger railroads are doing this over their entire routes, both for passengers and freight. They are picking out the unprofitable stretches and giving motor bus service at less cost and gathering new passen-

The regulation of interstate and intrastate operation of buses is a problem which concerns many lines of industry. The bus has changed the entire mode of life of millions of Americans. The latest reports from the 1929 census indicate that workers who formerly lived in close proximity to their places of employment no longer find it necessary to do so. With the new methods of transportation available, they are moving to the suburbs and the occurrence of strikes of large industrial cities are being wiped out. In a score of industrial centers these sub-

MANY WISCONSIN ITEMS LISTED FOR APPROPRIATIONS

Senate Adds Several Features After House Passes
Bill

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent)

Washington—The final appropriation bill of the session, which will soon become a law, provides numerous appropriations for Wisconsin projects.

To the appropriations already approved by the House of Representatives in this bill, the Senate added funds to start work on the fish cultural substation for southern Wisconsin and the fish food studies in the lakes, and $35,000 for the construction and equipment of a Coast Guard station at Strawberry Passage, in Green Bay.

Sen. John J. Blaine introduced the amendment for the $35,000 coast guard station. A law was passed in 1929 authorizing this station for life-saving purposes for the long stretch of coast without such service. Every year Admiral Frederick B. Smith, commandant of the coast guard, has sought appropriations for the station, but the director of the bureau has refused to approve the estimates.

An appropriation of $480,000 to start work on the $650,000 coast guard cutter for Lake Michigan was also provided in the bill. This cutter for rescue and assistance work was authorized as the result of the terrible disasters in the storming of last fall on Lake Michigan.

Funds to lend to deserving individuals to enable them to attend the University of Wisconsin, and educational institutions are provided in the bill.

Rep. George J. Schwab, of Appleton, has long sought this in an appropriation bill to aid young men, who want to study forestry and to feed their families, to enable them to do so.

The only other appropriation for Wisconsin Indians in the bill is for increase to $125,000 in the cost of the Tomah Indian hospital, which originally was to cost only $65,000.

Appropriations to start work on the following Wisconsin federal buildings are provided in the bill:

Beloit, $270,000, an increase of $40,000 over the original estimate.

South Milwaukee, $120,000, an increase of $20,000.

Two Rivers, $150,000, an increase of $30,000.

Wisconsin Rapids, $125,000, an increase of $15,000.

The bill also provides an appropriation of $3,500 for extension of the outlook system in the James H. McLaughlin building, in Green Bay.

As in operating expenses, the Western Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Milwaukee.

Under a change in the law, the state will be able to complete purchase of some 274 acres of land for the Upper Wisconsin Indians in the state.

This provision will allow the government to pay an average of $7 an acre instead of $5 an acre for the land.

The bill went to conference between the senate and house of representatives, and only the coast guard station and the fisheries appropriation could be changed, as the houses agreed on all other items. The fisheries estimates were increased by the bureau's budget, so there was no likelihood of their being changed.

The appropriation bill also got the house vote in funds to begin a study of the relation of the state to the Wisconsin National Guard.

Wisconsin went to the senate
for the final vote.

OPEN FISH REFUGE TO ANGLERS FOR SEASON

Madison (CPA)—Certain areas in a number of Wisconsin lakes set aside as fish refuges to protect bass and other late spawning fish will be open to the fishermen Tuesday, according to the conservation commission.

The refuges were established at the opening of the lake fishing season. All trout refuges established in small feeder creeks to trout streams, a fish refuge below the Winter dam on Coe's river and one in the Mazomanie mill pond in Vernon are closed to fishing until August 1, however.

PETTIFOGGING POLITICIANS

The minority report of the foreign relations committee of the senate on the London naval treaty reads like some of the party platforms one sees from time to time in politically "advanced" states like Wisconsin. There is not one strictly accurate and truthful statement in the report. It is a sweeping aggregation of alleged facts that do not exist, and of conclusions that are wholly the author's creation. It is not even a subtle appeal to jingoism and prejudice; it is so illogical in its misstatements and distortions as to offend every sense of justice and fairness.

The minority report denounces the Washington arms treaty of 1922 as a "surrender" of American rights and prestige—a treaty which the whole world and all intelligent Americans recognize as a landmark in the great movement for disarmament, and which has been accepted and approved as a triumph of statesmanship. It charges that the London pact "abandons the American naval policy, sustained for more than a century." It will seem to level-headed persons that this is a good thing to do, for the policy of the past, if there was a policy, was a willingness to accept inferiority and not compete with Great Britain. True, we could have built beyond Great Britain any time we chose, but during the "more than a century" to which the minority report refers we never chose to. Under the London treaty we have the privilege of building up to the British standard without competition. The fighting power of the two fleets will be as nearly equal as human ingenuity can make it. The statement that they will be unequal is gratuitous misrepresentation.

The opposition summary further asserts that we can build the cruisers Great Britain "permits" us to build. That is an insulting term, both to the British government and to our own. It is untruthful, cheap and demagogic. The treaty was concluded by both nations as equals, and all terms were approved by the two governments. The big navy crowd in all three nations, including Japan, insists that its country was worsted in the negotiations. The people should be "on" to these super-patriots, whose sole idea is to get the better of the other fellow and to build a navy almost without limit. It is contended that the navy authorized by the treaty will not be sufficiently powerful to protect "our vast seaborne commerce." We never in our history have had a navy capable of doing that, never will have and there is no occasion for such a navy. We will be in as strong a position as ever to protect our commerce as a neutral in time of war between other nations, but never should we be at war ourselves, treaty or no treaty.

Disarmament or limitation of armament does not contemplate strength sufficient to prosecute distant and offensive wars by sea; it is concerned almost entirely with defensive security, and it is apparent that in proportion as the first principle is carried out the latter is also advanced. Finally, the statement that the treaty makes no saving to taxpayers is a similar distortion. We save as much in battleship replacements as it will cost to add new cruisers, and we obtain a better balanced fleet. How much we save is dependent upon congress.

The arguments presented by the four members of the foreign relations committee, headed by Johnson of California, why the treaty should be rejected remind us of the reasons put forward by weaklings when Lincoln made known his decision to issue the emancipation proclamation. A study of the two points of view would reveal startling similarities of logic, moral discernment and national perspective. The opponents of the London treaty may be classed with obstructionists who fought all vital changes in national and international policies, but which if analyzed with candor and intelligence plainly represented progress and wisdom.

We have had our Johnsons and Moseses at all periods. They fought the Louisiana purchase, they denounced the acquisition of Alaska, they ridiculed the settlement of the Northwest territory boundary dispute, they have challenged our policies in the Orient, both in China and Japan, they have had us at war with the latter time and again. They will attempt to prevent construction of the St. Lawrence seaway no matter what kind of a treaty we make with Canada and regardless of its terms and conditions. They are not to be trusted. They have no vision, no balance. They see red if the trees rustle in the wind; they are our malcontents, always bent on rocking the boat. They can never distinguish statesmanship from hokum. The stuff the foreign relations committee minority has cooked up against the London treaty is worthy of the general classification to which they belong.

RHINELAND OCCUPATION

Occupation of the Rhineland has officially and actually come to an end. The French troops have moved out and the territory occupied for nearly twelve years after the armistice is restored to Germany. The Rhineland is to stage a continuous celebration of the event all summer. It is an emancipation in which they rejoice to an almost boundless degree. They have considered it unjust. They have naturally resented the hardships it has imposed, to say nothing of the still greater offense against their political liberty.

But the Rhineland should bear in mind that Germany was the loser in the war. They should not forget that supreme fact, nor none of its wide significances. The truth is, the Rhineland got off very easily. The penalties it paid were as nothing to those suffered by invaded France for four years. To appease its wounded pride, it might also consider what would have been the certain fate of Belgium and a part of France if Germany had won.

The so-called liberation of the Rhineland is a wholesome event. It tends to restore stable relations and good feeling in Europe, but it is wrong to get the idea that occupation was not justified or was unduly prolonged. It came about in the natural course of the war's settlements, and it was delayed quite as much by German resistance as by French insistence. The real cause for celebration in the Rhineland is not freedom from oppression, but a fortunate train of events which made it possible for France to consent to it. Occupation of the Rhineland was in every way a legitimate peace measure, to which Germany could make no proper complaint until the final obligations, responsibilities and results of the war were assessed and definitely fixed.

More Truth Than Poetry

SOMETHING MORE TO WORRY OVER
We are mildly intrigued when the powers agree that war is a trifle too rough; "Let us limit the range of our navy," say we. "And cut out the bluster and bluff!" We pay little heed to the national need for battleships, gunboats and cruisers. But we madly pursue every item of news that relates to a couple of bruisers. While we cry, with a hoarse and belligerent growl: "He can't be a champ if he won on a foul."

We talk of the tariff, but not very much. And our language is calm and serene; in schedules of commodities and tax-need and such. Our interest could not be called keen. Such subjects as this with a frown we dismiss as remote from our life and our calling. But, beyond any doubt, how that box-fight came out.

Is a theme which is wildly enthralling. In store and in workshop and office and dwelling. There is hardly a topic but "Sharkey and Schmeller."

We feel for the farmers who furnish our food. And we trust they will get what they need: To a fidgety market we sadly allude. And feel very woeful indeed.

But our serious thought is still constantly fraught. With a troubled and worrisome doubt. As to how, if that punch had been over the lunch. The fight might perhaps have come out.

We must daily dispute till our foreheads grow damp. But we'll never discover who really is champ!

BIRTH OF LEIBNITZ
On July 1, 1646, Gottfried Leibnitz, one of the most extraordinary examples of universal scholarship in intellectual history, was born at Leipzig, Germany. Though he was eminent in history, divinity, philosophy, political studies, science, mathematics, engineering and literature, it is chiefly through his philosophical and mathematical reputation that he lives in history.

Entering the university at the age of 15, Leibnitz received his bachelor's degree two years later when he produced his remarkable thesis "On the Principle of Individuation." In 1670, at the age of 24, after he had studied law, he was appointed assessor on the bench of the upper court of appeals, which was the supreme court of appeals.

An interesting sidelight on the man's versatility may be had in a military memorandum he drew up while in Paris. He proposed a plan for the invasion of Egypt with a view of submitting it to Louis XIV. His real intention in this memorandum was to divert Louis' attention from plans against Germany. The king never received the document. It remained for Napoleon to make the invasion of Egypt in 1798, and to discover five years later that he had been anticipated in his plan by Leibnitz.

After publishing his greatest philosophical work, "Theodicy," Leibnitz engaged in a controversy with Newton concerning the discovery of differential calculus. In this work, however, it was later revealed that both men had made original contributions.

SHOULD INDIGESTION BE FORGOT.

In any large series of patients complaining of persistent or recurring "indigestion" peptic ulcer is responsible for the symptoms in 10 per cent of the cases. In 50 per cent of cases of peptic ulcer the lesion is situated in the duodenum (intestine just beyond the outlet of stomach) and in only 10 per cent of cases is the ulcer in the stomach. The symptoms—which, by the way, shall be a secret between the patient and his own physician as far as we are concerned—do not give much indication as to the situation of the ulcer. However, it is a matter of comparatively small moment whether the ulcer is in your first stomach or in your second stomach; indeed you might never have known you had a second stomach were it not for your duodenal ulcer. Don't argue about it; I'm telling you everybody has two stomachs practically, unless and until some eager surgeon gets in there and short circuits one of them out of business. That is precisely what the surgeon does to peptic ulcer; he taps the alimentary tube a short distance proximal, if you have your dictionary handy, and hooks it up with a loop of the tube from a short distance distal, which ought to be in every vest pocket telegraph, and thus cuts off the damaged portion of the canal. Then he washes up and goes to his club to take his ease whilst old nature, in gratitude for the physiological rest thus given the affected area, heals the ulcer. Probably a plain ordinary home or all round doctor could accomplish the same thing in the same way only in a less spectacular fashion. But shucks! there wouldn't be the same thrill in it for the patient, and besides there are no clubs for all round doctors except the one public opinion is so fond of using on them.

Disregarding an immediate mortality rate of from 2 to 10 per cent, the not uncommon occurrence of secondary gastrojejunal ulceration (that means another ulcer forming at the place where the new connection is made), the almost inevitable adhesions around the site of operation, and the less common kinking and obstruction of the intestine, and the chance of subsequent hemorrhage, perforation and malignant degeneration, operation for peptic ulcer is a great success.

Gastro-enterostomy is the name of the operation which short circuits the ulcer area. It means literally making an opening from the stomach into the intestine below the damaged place. More radical procedures have been adopted by surgeons in recent years. A common one is pyloroplasty, sort of a reconstruction of the pylorus or outlet of the stomach; other radical methods are pylorotomy and excision (cutting out more or less of the part of stomach and the ulcer area of intestine), and most radical of all, subtotal gastrectomy, which means cutting out considerable portions of the stomach.

Personally, I rather enjoy operations, that is, if you will give me first a nice shot of scopolamine-morphine, you know, "truth serum," "twilight sleep," and association, and then the good old ether with lots of pure fresh air at least until I forget to notice the contractions of the air. But if I had peptic ulcer I'd just be polite to surgeons until my own doctor's ingenuity and patience were exhausted or until he told me firmly but gently that it was no go and we'd better talk it over with some conservative operator.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Sunlight and Tuberculosis.

One of your correspondents asked how to get sunlight with the kid. Did you know that Dr. — and most other good chest men are not prescribing sunbaths for persons with pulmonary tuberculosis? Such patients should beware of the old fashioned doctors who prescribe sunlight for pulmonary cases. That mistake was made on me at first and I had to suffer for it. (L. E.)

Answer. — It may be that your doctor and others are not prescribing it, and they are certainly good men, yet other doctors as good do prescribe it and supervise its application, with benefit. Of course the patient's own physician is the best judge.

Vaccination Not Nice But Necessary.
Our community recently had smallpox outbreak. A few of us refused to be stamped into the orgy of vaccination. . . . (C. J. J.)

Answer. — I think that is foolish of you. However, I think the public health is well guarded if the health authorities content themselves with arrest or isolation ("quarantine") of all persons who do not believe in vaccination.

Foods With Starch In.
Kindly let me know what foods have starch in them. (R. P.)

Answer. — Well, I'll promise to name a long list of them if you'll tell me why you want to know. I'll give you no such information unless I believe it will be of benefit to you.

Two Years Treatment.
How long does it take to treat syphilis so that it can be checked? And just how much good it treatment supposed to do? Is it possible to check it enough if it is treated enough? (C. C.)

Answer. — My impression is that if the patient remains under treatment for two years the chance of arresting the disease is excellent. As a rule treatment is not kept up constantly, but by courses, with intervals of rest. The wise patient, even at the end of that time, will report to the physician once a year for the rest of his life and perhaps take a brief course of treatment if the doctor advises it.

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

THE man who drove the hay cart said, "My home is not far ahead. That's where I'm going to stop. Where will you Tynites go from there? We're pretty far from town right now. I guess, though, you'll get back somehow. 'Twill do you lots of good to walk out in the open air.'"

"Well, I don't know," was Clowry cried. "The walking stunt we've tried, and I know I'll get all tired out. Oh, my, what can we do? When do you drive to town again? I suppose you go there now and then. If it is soon, we all can wait and then ride back with you."

"Not till tomorrow," said the man. "But, even so, I guess you can stay overnight right at my home. You're welcome as can be. I have a barn that's filled with hay where you can sleep. What do you say? There's not a thing to harm you and it's quite all right with me."

The Travel Man then broke right in and said, "I guess this bunch has been around enough for one long day. I like your plan real well. I'll gladly pay for all our board. 'Hurry, hurry,' the Tynites heard. 'We're going to sleep in the big barn. Oh, go, that's swell!'"

So, after supper they all went up in the big hay loft, intent on getting in a night of sleep before another day. Each one of them slept very sound. The morning found them running round. Soon they were bound for Moscow. They enjoyed it all the way.

When they were at their journey's end the Travel Man exclaimed, "Now lend an ear and listen to my plan. Odessa is the place where we will next look all around." Soon, for Odessa they were bound. The Tynmites were pleased. A smile broke out on each one's face.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSCOCK

New York—A foreign looking gentleman with a trunk and a couple of bags bearing the labels of European capitals scrawled his name on the register of a Fifth Avenue hotel a few Mondays ago and was shown to a modest suite.

There was nothing about his appearance to indicate that he was more than the ordinary traveler just arrived off a liner.

At the end of the week, however, the cashier, in making out the bills, noticed that the foreigner had made $1,500 worth of telephone calls.

Now the New York hotels are used to large telephone bills. Even the smaller, exclusive inns of Fifth Avenue pay the "phone company" as much as $10,000 a month for service. But $1,500 was rather an extraordinary sum to accumulate opposite the name of a single guest, so the cashier immediately presented the bill.

"Where'd I come from," he said, "we pay the telephone bills once a month."

"I understand," said the cashier, "but it is our custom to collect at the end of the week."

"But I haven't that much with me," said the guest. "However, here is my letter of credit which you may deposit until I draw the sum against it."

And it was then that the cashier learned that this unobtrusive guest was a Czechoslovakian capitalist, worth, as he later found out, some $50,000,000. There had been nothing extraordinary about the $1,500 item. He merely had talked to his wife, back home in Prague, every night over the transatlantic telephone.

"HELLO, STRANGER!"

This story, which comes from a telephone man, is one that could happen only in a place where millionaires are a more or less common tribe.

Another of a different sort happened a few days ago in front of a restaurant.

A Broadway play producer was passing by when a young woman of his acquaintance came out. They stopped to talk and in the course of the conversation the girl asked, "By the way, have you met my husband?"

Just at that moment a man appeared through the restaurant door and the producer offered his hand, with a cordial "How do you do?"

"How do you do?" returned the man, with a vigorous shake of the hand and then, to the producer's amazement, turned and walked away.

"What a strange way for your husband to act," remarked the girl's friend. "I hope I didn't offend him."

"Why said the woman, "that wasn't my husband. I never saw him before."

TOOTH CONSCIOUS.
This was hardly so embarrassing, however, as the experience of a young woman at a luncheon the Literary Guild gave a departing editor a couple weeks ago.

"I believe we've met," she said, with a polite smile.

"I'm sorry," the tooth-puller apologized. "I don't remember faces very well. But if you will open your mouth a little wider I can soon tell."

St. John Ervine, critic, says that night drinking is ruining the drama. Now is the time for some enterprising bootlegger to advertise his product: "Not a Hiccough in a Carload."

Allan Hoover, who has taken a summer job in a radiator factory, is reported to be "eager to begin work." In fact he's all steamed up over it.

But actors would prefer to have booze in than looks from their audience.

Have you heard about the college which invited Will Rogers to deliver its bacchanalian address?

In Chicago it is now proper, of course, for gangsters to refer to their descendants as off-shoots.

A BYSTANDER IN WASHINGTON

BY HERBERT FLANNERY

Washington—Those gentlemen in Washington, referred to collectively as the "newspaper boys," long will remember this first congress under the Hoover administration which is fast drawing to a close.

For it has set a record as far as demanding work of them is concerned.

Lanky, genial Jim Preston, superintendent of the senate press gallery, who has been a press landmark on capitol hill for more than two score years, can't remember the time when there has been such activity as has marked the closing days of the first congress.

And since the activity in Washington correspondent may be taken as a gauge of public interest in national affairs, the fact that they have had few, if any, idle moments of late is indicative of something.

In fact, so impressed was the veteran Preston with the industry of the "boys" around him that one day recently he sat down and counted noses on those at work. As superintendent of the gallery, it is up to him to try to maintain liaison with the groups of newspapermen scattered at various points on the hill.

ACTIVITY ALL AROUND

Here is what he found:
At the foreign relations committee, where Senator Borah and his colleagues were examining the London naval treaty, 24 reporters were at work.

At the session of the committee on naval affairs, which heard the views of naval experts on the London treaty, 12 reporters were at work.

There were 15 sitting in on the lobby committee headed by Senator Caraway.

Six were reporting the testimony of Secretary of State Stimson before the committee on insular affairs on independence for the Philippines.

Seven were covering the hearings before a sub-committee of the commerce committee on long and short railroad hauls.

ISSUES WARNING AGAINST SHOOTING OFF FIRECRACKERS

Police Chief Says Premature Celebrations Will Bring Arrests

Police Chief George T. Prim today issued a warning against premature celebration of July 4.

The chief pointed out that laws prohibit the shooting of firecrackers, except on July 4, and that his officers will be instructed to arrest anyone shooting them before that date.

Chief Prim also said that he was taking steps to prevent the shooting of firecrackers along the streets on which the American Legion parade will march on July 4. The chief pointed out there would be many horses in the parade and that there was a chance, if firecrackers were exploded near them, that an accident might be caused. He said that motorcycle officers would be assigned to patrol the line of march and arrest anyone shooting firecrackers on charges of disorderly conduct.

Despite the new state laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of firecrackers more than two inches long and three-eighths of an inch in diameter, there are many of these "oversize" crackers to be seen in hands of young boys not only in Appleton, but in all the other cities and villages in this vicinity.

While these illegal firecrackers are not being displayed, nevertheless, they are being sold and set off in violation of the law.

The new state law also prohibits the shooting of skyrockets, roman candles, toy pistols and cans, and torpedoes.

However, under the law, these fireworks may be set off, only when a special permit has been issued by the city mayor, village president or town chairman. Then they must be set off in an open field or on water.

Failure to comply with the law would constitute ground for removal from office of the official. A bond of $5,000 would be required from any person or organization setting off such fireworks, under a permit.

Any person who sells illegal fireworks is responsible for any damage they may do.

Merely The Baer Facts

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

New Jersey has grabbed the lead-off position in politics long held by that sovereign state of Maine.

Maine was Republican long before it got to be notorious. It was Republican when Washington held that winter sports carnival at Valley Forge and it will continue to be Republican until the sands of the desert are back on the barroom floor.

As Maine goes, so goes the election. We heard that slogan many years ago. We drank it in with mother's milk and they are still drinking it with father's gin.

When Maine goes for prohibition the rest of the nation falls into place like dots on the line. And when Maine goes for the hard cider the other states go for the fire extinguishers.

Statemen and other forms of vegetable life watch the Maine returns like an ant watches a picnic grove.

That was yesterday. Today the nation is listening to the state of New Jersey which has suddenly been wired for transcontinental.

Morrow. Showing that you do not have to be on foot to be a jaywalker.

Two of his competitors were dry. A dry is a man who can fall into a lake of Scotch and not have sense enough to open his mouth and yell for help. At least you drown happy.

This is why New Jersey has taken Maine's place as the bell cow in the national dairy herd. Jersey is wet and admits it. While Maine demands a trial by jury.

And when should the country go as Maine goes when New York and New Jersey are connected by a vehicular and passenger tunnel? (Copyright 1930, by Arthur Baer.)

West Virginia Sales Tax Is Described By Governor

Salt Lake City—(P)—The operation of the gross sales tax of West Virginia was described by Gov. M. G. Conley of that state, as the greatest single source of revenue of the state government, in an address before the national governors' conference here Monday.

Governor Conley said the tax in reality a selective gross sales tax, at different rates, was in compliance with the constitution of the state and that it was a fair and equitable application of the principle of taxation take on the color and character of an income tax, of a depletion tax, of a consumption tax, of a property tax.

Enacted as an emergency revenue producing measure in 1921, Governor Conley said, every person, firm, partnership, association, and corporation engaged in business for profit in the state and doing a business of $10,000 annually, and those engaged in the practicing of professions and having annual gross income of $10,000 were required to pay a gross sales tax at rates fixed by the legislature.

As it is applied at present, the governor said, the tax falls on the wealthy and efficient and on the shiftless and inefficient equally. Under its terms, an industry that is actually operating at a heavy loss, though doing an immense gross volume of business, would be taxed far more than another industry making a large net income but doing a small gross volume of business. While this condition is unfortunate, it cannot be remedied by the substitution of some other one tax for the gross sales tax.

The Story of Sue
by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

"HAT isn't what I meant," Sue explained to Miles, laughing, too. It had been funny, she reflected, to tell him that if he fell for any other girl while waiting for her to make up her mind, she wouldn't object. "I meant that in case my mind doesn't work the way you want it to tonight..." she emphasized the thought...

"When Diogenes was looking for an honest man somebody should have given him your address. He wouldn't have believed that a woman let the truth go unadorned, too," he said.

He didn't know that the girl's side was remembering the way she had pledged her faith to another man, not meaning it, just to show Barbara that she was independent. She caught her breath. Ever since she had known Jack she had been at odds with the girls whom he knew best. Sybil, then Barbara. They had both disliked her intensely. Why, she asked herself? Because they thought that she understood the art of chasing a man up a tree and waiting beneath until he fell out of it. They didn't know she wasn't skilled in the archery one played in the merry greenwood with hearts as pawns.

But she wasn't going to be a meek Elaine who waited on a bench in Camelot until Lancelot got tired of the queen and rode by again, waving his plumed helmet as he passed. Life was too eager, awake, full of interest, to waste time on one man! Not even Jack should keep her out of the market-place!

Sue felt happier when she went to work the next morning. Her indignation had been so thoroughly roused against Barbara that when Barbara came in the office to see Jack, smiling softly, with a golden smile that made yellow points of light in her purple eyes, Sue merely said good morning quietly and pressed Jack's buzzer. Last night she could play up for the sake of the party. Today was different. This was a business office. She was Jack's secretary... a glorified term for the all-around stenographer and switchboard operator... and Barbara had let her know that she placed her on a lower social plane. She would stay there.

"You're still... hurt, aren't you, Sue?" Barbara said in a voice that she intended to make ingratiating. "Hurt? No, I'm not hurt. Mr. Thornton will see you at once."

"I didn't come to see him. I wanted to see you... first."

"Oh, won't you be seated? I'll be through at the switch in just a minute. Judge Thornton is expecting a long distance call."

"It's just this way," Barbara said when Sue turned to her. Miss Parsons had left the room. "It's rather embarrassing for you to work here. ... You're Harry Becker's sister-in-law and so you'll be thrown with us socially sometimes perhaps and to have you as my husband's office assistant... You can see that it wouldn't be right if you weren't employed here."

"I was employed by Judge Thornton. I believe any complaints concerning my work should be made to him," Sue was saying, quietly. inwardly she was angry. She felt the blood coming too fast as it went through her heart. "Here he is now. Suppose you tell him about it."

COLORS LOSE THEIR IDENTITY IN NEW PERSPECTIVE FILM

Entirely New Color Scheme Arranged to Meet Requirement of New Type

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright 1930, by Cona. Press
Hollywood, Calif. (CPA)—Brown is red and green is black and red is white, and if this sounds insane you'll have to blame it on the brand new kind of film which gives greater depth to black-and-white photography but plays hob with lipstick, rouge puff, and what the well-dressed star should wear. They are using the new film at First National, and laying in a supply of brown lipstick.

The luscious red which erstwhile looked her mouth when the star pursued her beauty upon the black-and-white film, now looks a sickly ivory. The cream-and-carmine make-up of yesterday and yesterday now turns to blotchy white. And the entire color scheme of actors' clothes, such as pink or pale yellow which becomes white before the old-fashioned camera, has been disarranged. Brown lips are compulsory for the new film. You meet these Mexican-looking persons with chocolate lips, wandering around the sets, and discover that they are yesterday's blondes who will still be blondes in tomorrow's pictures. It is very confusing.

As to clothes, nobody has yet discovered all the tricks which the new film plays in the matter of tints. Clear red, anyhow, reproduces as white. Henna of the rosy sort reproduces as gray. Blue of a certain shade is white in the picture, and blue of another shade changes to black.

The biggest shock of all was when Irene Rich wore a turquoise ensemble of which the frock was chiffon and the cloak in the same shade of velvet. Because the materials of frock and cloak were different, however, the darn camera recorded the cloak as black and the dress as white.

Things grow more complicated out here every hour.

New York—Al Smith has won a race with Dick Byrd. It came out at the New York Athletic club's dinner to admit "It started for Washington about the same time the admiral started for the pole and beat him back by almost 20 months," said Al.

ONE DAY ONLY

No Charge for Consultation

Mr. C. F. Redlich, the successful expert says:

The "Perfect Retention Shields" hold the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief, contract the opening in a remarkably short time and strengthen the weak tissues (the real cause of rupture) so that they frequently recover their previous natural retaining power, needing no further outside support. Stomach trouble, backache and constipation often caused by Rupture promptly disappear.

Truly remarkable and prompt results have been obtained not only with recent and not fully developed ruptures but also with old, long neglected ones.

Ingenious, recently perfected devices are now holding ruptures firmly which heretofore never had been retained.

No elastic belts nor filthy leg-straps are used.

I guarantee the durability of my absolutely sweat and moisture proof, sanitary appliances.

75% of ruptured children recover completely through expert mechanical treatment according to statistics.

Do not waste your money on widely advertised mail order contraptions. You cannot fit yourself.

Our Children

By Angelo Patri

WHAT CHILDREN PAY
There is a certain queer quick in human nature that makes us value what we get according to the price set upon it. And everything has its price, even to children. The price a child has to pay for what he gets determines his attitude toward it, and toward things in general, because his getting is all he knows about living just then.

"Isn't it time for Jennie to have her bottle?"

"Yes, but as long as she is quiet I won't bother. When she cries I'll give it to her."

So, Tears and howls are the price Jennie pays for her food. Tommy Tucker sang for his supper but Jennie waits for hers. Tommy's price will be less likely to harm his career. Jennie's is likely to prove costly to her and to all who know her.

"Gee, I'd like to own one of those outfits. I bet I could play like a champ if I had a suit like that. How much does one cost?"

"Oh, about twenty bucks, I guess. Doesn't matter. I'll make Dad give me one."

"My Dad won't give me one. He'll say, 'If you want to pay that price for a ball suit, go ahead. Seems to me a lot of money for a boy to earn and spend all in a lump. And he'd be about right at that. I'd have to cut a lot of grass and deliver a good many packages for twenty dollars. Then I'd have nothing left for other things. Can't play ball but a few times anyway. I pass. Come on.'"

If a boy can make Dad give him anything he wants, he is paying a far higher price for his possessions than is the lad who knows that Dad will not give him a cent beyond what has been agreed upon as right and equitable. The lad who must stand upon his own feet will grow a couple of them guaranteed to maintain any kind of load, travel any distance with security. The easy way pays the highest price in the long run.

Children must pay for their education in terms of self-activity, or they will get only the cheapest sort of article. It will break down under strain, it will collapse at the crisis. Only that for which the child gave his own blood and brain cells to capture will stand by him.

The child is willing to pay the price for his education. It is we who insist that he remain quiescent and accept what we offer him. We allow very little personal experience to enter the school. We permit very little personal expression within the school. Teacher knows best, is our motto. We cannot have the schoolroom messed up. We cannot leave the bustle and movement and waste of personal experience in the school building.

Are we buying an education for the children or peace for ourselves? It requires a new type of school, a new type of teacher, to accept the right price from a child for his education. We are not building those schools. We are not training those teachers. We are forcing the child to pocket his price and take our education for nothing.

There lies our danger for the child. Being essentially human he is going to value our education at precisely its price, nothing.

FASHION DECREES DULLNESS MUST GO

Patent Leather Shoes and Handbags Favored to Add Lustre and Glisten

BY AILEEN LAMONT
Copyright 1930 by Post-Crescent

New York (CPA)—Now that Paris has got every woman to wear the lustrous crepes, georgettes, printed silks, and other materials of dull finish, she has decided that the costume must go to glisten somewhere. Accordingly, she is now favorably disposed toward patent leather shoes and handbags for daytime, and the same shoes—which lately she scored—for evening. Ah, well, that's Paris, isn't it?

It took this season to make just plain brown a color for accessories. Brown stockings with white shoes are now accompanied by brown ribbons on white or straw-colored hats. And along come brown suede gloves, half-arm lengths, to match the brown stockings and to wear with sports frocks that are pale pink, blue, green, or violet in tint and sleeveless.

This is the heyday of clips. Now they're seen not only on slippers and hats, but also on shoulders and necks in the evening. Double or single, these clips hold up the shoulder straps and hold down the top of the slip or whatnot where it tries to edge above the front of the deep-cut bodice.

DRUNK ANXIOUS TO CARE FOR FLOWERS IN ILLINOIS JAIL

Chicago (AP)—Flower lovers will be relieved to learn that Frank (Santa Claus) Fisher is back at the jail for 15 days on a charge of drinking too much and too often.

Frank was plainly worried about the bridewell flower beds when he faced Judge Padden yesterday.

"I fear," he said "they are not getting watered enough. If there should come a drought, no telling what might happen."

"Perhaps you are right," the court said. "I'll give you 15 days and will expect you to look after the flowers with your usual and often-demonstrated skill."

"Thanks," said Frank (Santa Claus) Fisher. "I do hope they haven't lost my sprinkling can since I was out there last."

GOLD STAR MOTHERS AT GRAVES IN ENGLAND

Woking, Surrey, England—(AP)—Thirty-seven American Gold Star mothers and widows today made a pilgrimage to the graves of sons and husbands who died in the World War and are buried in the American Military cemetery at Brookwood, near here.

The pilgrims, conducted by Col. R. P. L. of the United States Army, were at the cemetery by Major-General Sir Farivan War, chief chairman of the British Imperial War Graves commission, who addressed them.

In front of each grave a small American flag stood side by side with the Union Jack, and as each woman paused beside the burial ground of her dead she paid silent tribute for a moment and then completed her act of devotion by placing a wreath on the loved one's grave.

At the foot of the cemetery monument, from which flew the Stars and Stripes, there rested a clump of poppies from the British legion labeled.

"The imperishable memory of our American comrades."

MIX'S DAUGHTER STILL CLAIMS HIS SUPPORT

Los Angeles—(AP)—An affidavit by Mrs. Ruth Mix Gilmore, setting forth alleged promises made to her by her father, Tom Mix, cowboy film star, was on file today in Mrs. Gilmore's suit to prevent Mix from discontinuing the payment of $250 a month for her support.

After her recent marriage to Douglas Gilmore, screen actor, Mix sought cancellation of the agreement under which he was paying for Mrs. Gilmore's support.

Mrs. Gilmore's affidavit, filed yesterday, said Mix promised to continue the $250 monthly payments until she was 21 years old, and had assured her he would make her a motion picture star. The affidavit said he had done nothing toward obtaining motion picture work for her and that she needed the monthly income because she had purchased a $13,000 home.

STALIN FOES CRUSHED WITH HAND OF IRON

Central Committee Blots Out Last Vestige of Right Wing Opposition

Moscow—(AP)—All regular forces within the Communist party today were active in crushing out the last vestige of right wing opposition. Joseph Stalin and his central committee again have emerged triumphant and with enormously enhanced political prestige. The fate of Stalin's political foes today amounted to political annihilation. Rykov, identified with right wing opposition for a decade and the holder of many offices, Tomsky, executive committee member and agitator extraordinary; Uglanov, commissar of labor and a strong man by his own right; even Bucharin, one-time editor of Pravda and left wing central committeeman, all these have gone down in the dust at Stalin's feet. This quartet, who next to Leon Trotsky, fought most vigorously against the central committee's policies and Stalin's leadership have surrendered completely to majority rule within the party.

Unity and organization apparently never was stronger than it is today. Although Rykov, Tomsky and Uglanov, once dominating figures in official life, made the most abject recantations, their schismatic views, the Communist congress before which they pleaded rejected their confessions as insincere, hypocritical and unsatisfactory.

"You are lying. Don't try to conceal your mistakes," shouted one enraged delegate as Rykov pleaded he always had favored the maximum tempo of industrialization.

RYKOFF ON DEFENSIVE

"In your speech at the Ural Communist congress," bawled another Stalin supporter, "you declared that no correct policy of the central committee party could guarantee us from a restoration of capitalism."

Rykov replied, "I consider that statement absolutely correct. It corresponds with the decision of the Fourteenth Party congress."

In 1921 was first assistant to Nikolai Lenin, then supreme in power. He had been head of the council of national economy and later became vice president of the supreme council of labor and defense.

Throughout their speeches of retraction the three, Rykov, Tomsky and Uglanov, who resembled humiliated defendants on the witness stand, frequently were interrupted with derisive and sarcastic remarks which clearly showed they had not much chance of acquittal before such a hostile audience.

"Some of the speeches here," said Rykov pathetically, seem to indicate that you mistrust us and believe we continue our struggle against the central committee secretly. Is it possible to fight secretly against a party of 2,000,000 members?"

But even this failed to gain the Soviet prime minister the favor of the huge gathering because another delegate shouted, "you recollect a conversation between Bucharin and Kamenef, and your attempts to create an anti-party bloc?"

"I never identified myself with Bucharin's act," humbly replied Rykov.

"But you knew about it. It was one of your maneuvers," persisted the heckling delegate.

Leon Kiselev, acting premier and third vice president of the Soviet Union and president of the Moscow soviet in 1924 and had been powerful since the revolution. His power had expanded as had that of Bucharin.

It remained for Comrade Kiroff, secretary of the Leningrad branch of the party, to express openly on the floor of the convention the attitude of the party as a whole on the recalcitrance of the right wing leaders.

WARNS RIGHT WING

Kiroff, one of Stalin's staunchest supporters, warned the right wing their opposition was wholly incompatible with membership in the party which henceforth would conduct even greater measures against the right wing.

Kiroff's warning is reiterated in even stronger terms by today's official Pravda and Izvestia.

"It is time to finish absolutely with the right wing opposition," both Kremlin mouthpieces said as with one voice. They insisted that Bucharin must come out not only with a confession of guilt but with a categorical pledge to correct his former mistakes through deeds and practical work.

"We want not merely suave diplomatic speeches but honest admissions of errors. The members of the congress demand the decisive measures and firmer decisions regarding right wing opposition, not only to propagate these opportunist declarations of opposition but those who adhere to them should be kicked out of the party."

START TESTIMONY IN FEDERAL CASE AGAINST OIL FIRMS

Important Plans Hinge on Outcome of Suit Brought by Government

BY PRESTON S. KRECKER
(Copyright 1930, by Cons. Press)

New York — (CPA) — Important plans hinge on the taking of testimony in New York today in the government's case against the Standard Oil Company of New York and the Vacuum Oil company to prevent consummation of the agreement reached by those two companies to merge.

Both were units of the old Standard Oil trust dissolved by supreme court decree in 1911. Now they seek to reunite, not as a trust but as a greater independent oil company. The fact that both companies willingly take the case to court, instead of acquiescing in the government's view that they are inhibited by the 1911 decree from consolidating, indicates how vital to their future the two organizations consider the outcome of this litigation.

The plan to consolidate two units of the old oil trust serves to direct attention to the peculiar and difficult position in which the oil industry finds itself today. The problem of most basic industries today is one of creating a demand for their products during these times of general business depression.

USE LESS THAN USUAL

The world is using less than normal is the case, with the result that volume of industrial activity has declined from 25 to 40 per cent in many lines and the business of individual corporations has declined in proportion. Witness the falling off in steel output, copper manufacture, consumption of crude rubber and of iron ore and other products.

In the case of the oil industry there has been no such decline in demand, despite the business depression. On the contrary there is every indication that the world will use more oil and oil products this year than in any previous year in history, not excepting 1929, when all records for consumption of oil were broken. Statistics available show that consumption of gasoline so far this year has run about 12 per cent ahead of that for the corresponding 1929 period.

Neither is there any problem of supply to both oil companies. There is an apparently unlimited stock of crude oil underground, which can be tapped at any time and in any quantity desired. The problem of the oil industry, therefore, is simply of adjusting supply to the ever-increasing demand and preventing waste of one of nature's most valuable resources without at the same time indulging in cut-throat competition. In other words, the problem of oil companies is largely one of marketing.

SOME IMPROVEMENT

Much has been done towards regulating production of crude oil and something has been accomplished towards curtailing excess production of gasoline. The American Petroleum association also has adopted a code of business ethics designed to eliminate all unfair business practices. Nevertheless the competition in the oil industry for gallenage is very keen and it is becoming keener every day. Hence the necessity of consolidations and creation of larger, wholly integrated units. The future of the oil industry may be visualized as concentration of the business into the hands of a comparatively few big companies.

Old territorial boundaries are being wiped out, as Standard Oil offshoots invade each other's fields, not

Wave To End Chicago Crime Makes And Breaks Russell

Chicago — (CP) — A wave of civic revisionism against hoodlums and gangsters swept William F. Russell into office as Chicago's police commissioner, and a second wave of popular indignation washed him out.

The clamor against his administration, which resulted in his resignation, arose after the fatal shooting of Al Lingle, Tribune reporter and intimate friend of Russell.

General "Bill" Russell, before his retirement from the commissioner's office, never had gone backward in the 30 years of his police service. In August, 1928, he became "boss" of the department. There had been gang killings; reform organizations complained the city was "wide open," that vice was rampant.

They demanded and got the official head of "Mike" Hughes, to fight each other so much as to war on common foes.

Strange as it may seem, there are only two companies in the country doing a nationwide business and neither is an offshoot of the old Standard Oil trust. Those companies are the Texas corporation and the Shell Union Oil. The former is an American company, but the Shell is controlled by the Royal Dutch. The Texas corporation enjoys the distinction of being the only company distributing its products in every state of the union. Shell Oil retails all over the country but not in every state as yet.

Whom Mayor William Hale Thompson had called upon the year before to "rid" Chicago of crime.

Scarcely had Russell comfortably fixed his bulk in the commissioner's chair when Tony Lombardo, a leader in Sicilian circles, was killed in daylight, downtown.

Russell then began the practice he followed for the next two years—rounding up all the known hoodlums and tossing them in jail. And at the six month mark of Russell's tenure, the St. Valentine's day massacre of seven was enacted. "Prohibition to blame," shouted the commissioner, and he explained that the profits in illicit liquor were the pawn of the rival gangs.

Twenty years ago, when Russell was walking a beat, he became a friend of Al Lingle, who developed into a crime reporter.

When Lingle was shot, Russell said, "I loved him as a son."

The commissioner did not have any children.

"I'm glad to get out of this mess," said Russell as he handed in his resignation, and he looked it.

During his term Russell inaugurated campaigns to provide cleaner stage and movie shows, and to stop "jaywalking." After a week of activity the "jaywalking" ordinances were repealed.

Major League Baseball Race Now Looks Like 1930 Fight

BRUNNS AND MACKS EXPECTED TO LEAD LOOPS ON JULY 4

Yankees and Nats Stay in Second Place With Victories Monday

BY ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

THE Fourth of July is the unofficial date for naming the winners of the major league pennants, but already the 1930 race resembles the 1929 chase with the Athletics out in front in the junior circuit and the Cubs setting a hot pace in the Heydler division.

If history repeats itself the young men managed by Cornelius McGillicuddy and the McCarthy inspired team will again battle for baseball's premier honor for on July 4, 1929, the Athletics were leading the American league and the Cubs showing the way in the National.

In contrast, however, to last year's campaign, the Mackmen are striving to pull away from the Yankees and Senators whereas in 1929 the St. Louis Browns were runner-ups at this stage of the race, with New York in third place. The world's champions failed again yesterday to gain ground on their rivals, although rallying in the eighth to defeat Detroit 3 to 1.

BABE HITS NO. 30

The Yankees kept pace with the champions by staging one of their frequent slug fests, during which Babe Ruth hit his thirtieth home run of the season and the fifteenth during the month of June. The Babe is now 12 games and 12 days ahead of his 1927 record, when he cracked out 60 four-base hits.

The White Sox were the victims of the Yankees' wrath, losing 15 to 4. The Washington Senators kept in the midst of the American league scramble, maintaining their place with the Yanks two games back of the Athletics. In defeating the St. Louis Browns, 2 to 1, the Senators were forced to battle down to the last inning, when they scored the winning run to break up the hurrying duel between Fred Marberry and George Blahodier. Marberry lost the Browns down with four hits, one of which was a home run by Kress.

A five-run rally off "Bull" Durham in the eighth gave the Indians an 8 to 3 verdict over the Red Sox. Elbe Beane started and finished his first game for Cleveland, holding the Sox to eight hits and four runs.

ROBINS IDLE
With the Robins idle because of wet grounds at St. Louis, the Cubs took advantage of the situation to increase their lead in the National league to one and one-half games as they defeated the Giants 10 to 3. This victory was the Cubs twelfth triumph in fourteen starts.

An eighteen attack in the first inning that sent Genevieve to the showers proved the downfall of the Giants. Thereafter the Cubs coasted along, back of Blake's consistent pitching. Gabby Hartnett connected with his seventeenth home run while Melvin Ott got his sixteenth.

In the only other National league game the Boston Braves managed to eke out a 6-5 victory over the Pirates. Lloyd Waner, who has been recovering from an operation, made his first appearance of the season in the Pittsburgh lineup.

New York Honors Bobby Tomorrow

BOBBY JONES

New York—(AP)—The emperor of Golf, Bobby Jones, will come home tomorrow to a welcome such as no golfer before him ever has received. A celebration of a size that ordinarily is reserved for trans-Atlantic fliers, returning war heroes and to foreign dignitaries, has been arranged when Bobby steps off the S. S. Eurymachus on his return from England where he won the British amateur and open championships.

In the crowd that gathers to do him honor as a great sportsman will be hundreds of friends from his hometown of Atlanta. A "Bobby Jones Special" steamed out of Atlanta yesterday with a train-load of the golfing wizard's admirers.

On the "Bobby Jones Special" were Major John S. Cohen, president and editor of the Atlanta Journal, who headed the committee which arranged the trip; Mayor L. N. Ragsdale, R. J. Al Singer No Puncher? Just Look At His Record

BY WILBUR WOOD
Copyright 1930

NEW YORK—A couple of years ago, when Al Singer was just beginning to catch the eye, the opinion was rather freely given that, though he was clever, he never would be much of a puncher.

These predictions have proved to be 100 per cent wrong, like so many other fistic prophecies. The punch is Singer's best asset right now, and if he is to win the lightweight title from Sammy Mandell when they clash at the Yankee Stadium on July 17, the old wallop should be the most important factor.

It was just a little more than thirteen months ago that Ignacio Fernandez knocked out the Bronx dynamiter. Since that fateful night Singer has gone to the post 15 times, scoring eight knockouts, winning six decisions and losing one disputed verdict, to Kid Chocolate. Included in that triumphal march is a verdict over Fernandez, who was floored by Singer for the first time in the Filipino's career, when they met in a return bout.

In those 15 contests each of the Bronx dynamiter's opponents, with the exception of Chocolate and Dominick Petrone, made at least one trip to the canvas. That constitutes about as fine a punching record as any one could wish.

Singer and Mandell got acquainted at Friday's meeting of the boxing commission. Al came in from his home from Europe with the news that a record breaking field of foreign stars will compete in the British-American track and field carnival at Soldier Field, Aug. 27.

Among the foreign stars certain to compete, President Brundage said, are Percy Williams, the Olympic sprint champion; Lord Burghley, 400 meters hurdle winner at Amsterdam; Eric Liddel, the Scot who won the 400 meters in Paris in 1924; Phil Edwards, star half miler from British Guiana; Alex Wilson, the Canadian quarter miler, and others from South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

ROBINS, YANKEES STRENGTHEN CLUBS

Ike Boone Bought by Brooklyn, Ken Holloway Goes to Yanks

New York—(AP)—Both Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn Robins and Bob Shawkey of the New York Yankees, have dug into the bankroll to strengthen their clubs for the dash down the major league home stretch.

Robinson announced yesterday that the Robins had purchased Ike Boone, slugging outfielder from the Mission club of the Pacific coast league, for immediate delivery. Boone, who was up with the Boston Red Sox a few seasons ago, is expected to fill a bad hole in left field for the Robins. Boone has hit around .400 in more than 70 games this year.

Shawkey secured Ken Holloway, veteran right hander of the Cleveland Indians, on waivers. With the Detroit Tigers for years, Holloway and Jackie Tavenner went to the Indians in the trade that put George Uhle in a Detroit uniform.

After that, matters will be in Bob's own hands. He will be invited to use a plane to fly to Minneapolis for the national open championship to be held at the Interlachen club July 10-11-12.

RALLY IN ELEVENTH INNING BEATS DALE

Scoring three runs in the eleventh inning, Berlin team of the Mid-Wisconsin league defeated Dale at Dale Sunday afternoon, 11 to 8. Each team counted 11 hits, but the Berliners had the punch in the eleventh inning when Dale's hurler weakened and the game went into the last column.

In another Mid-Wisconsin league game Waupaca defeated Wild Rose, 7 and 6.

SEE 3 YANK WOMEN IN NET TOURNAY

Dopesters Are Quiet After Monday's Upsets in Men's Singles

Wimbledon, Eng.—(AP)—Three of its stars safely in the semifinals of men's singles in the British tennis championships, America turned its attention to the quarter-finals of women's singles today.

Experts who saw their forecasts in the men's quarter-finals yesterday smashed to bits with Wilmer Allison's victory over Henri Cochet and George Lott's defeat by Jean Borotra, were wary of picking winners in the last eight of women's play.

Most of them contented themselves with a cautious selection of Helen Wills Moody to defeat Phyllis Mudford, youthful British player. Granting victory to Mrs. Moody, America had a chance to place three in the women's semi-finals just as she did in the men's Elizabeth Ryan, Californian, was matched with Betty Goodridge, Berkeley, Calif., against Cecile Aussem, of Germany. The fourth quarter-final round match brought together Joan Ridley of England and Mme. Rene Mathieu of France.

FANS WON'T LOSE ON RISKY-TUFFY FOUL

Chicago—(AP)—Customers attending the Johnny Risko-Tuffy Griffin heavyweight match at the Chicago Stadium tonight may not have been promised financial protection from a foul by Sidney Strotz, president of the Stadium.

"If the match ends in a foul," Strotz promised, "we will deduct the amount of the forfeited purse from the gross receipts of a rematch between the two fighters. Each tick will be reduced in price according to so that a customer who paid $1 for instance, for Wednesday night's bout can see the second fight for 75 cents."

MOOSE TOBIAS LOST TO BADGER GRIDDERS

Madison—(AP)—David "Moose" Tobias, La Crosse, husky tackle on last year's university of Wisconsin football team, will be ineligible for competition next fall, it was learned today. University authorities said Tobias fell short in his grades last semester.

What the Stars Did Yesterday

Fred Marberry, Senators—Let Browns down with four hits and drove in winning run in ninth.
Lance Richbourg, Braves—Singled with bases filled in eighth to drive in tying and winning runs against Pirates.

Sheriff Blake, Cubs—Stopped Giants with nine hits and beat them, 10-3.
Babe Ruth, Yankees—Hit single, double and thirtieth homer, drove in three as Yanks trimmed White Sox, 3-1.
Jimmy Fox, Athletics—Tripled with two on in eighth to beat Tigers, 5-1.

Joe McCarthy Lucky He Has Hartnett This Year

BY FRANCIS J. POWERS
Copyright 1930

CHICAGO—Joe McCarthy, aggressive manager of the Chicago Cubs, is willing to concede that it might have been worse. Since the opening day of the season the Cubs have been pursued by misfortune. This regular and that one went out of the game for stretches through injuries; Hal Carlson, a winning pitcher, died suddenly and Rogers Hornsby went out with a broken ankle. But it might have been worse for the Cubs and Joe McCarthy. They might not have had Gabby Hartnett. And without the big catcher the club probably would not be battling for first place.

The physician who twisted Gabby's injured throwing arm back into condition, during the winter, gave Mr. McCarthy an invaluable present. Hartnett has been back of the plate almost every game and is throwing almost as well as ever. But how he is hitting. He has bunched out 16 home runs and is one of the leading distance hitters of the National league. In addition he has made enough hits to earn a batting average better than .325 and that helps when a fellow like Hornsby is on the shelf.

Hartnett is one of the pepper jars of baseball and his unflinching spirit is a source of inspiration to the other Cubs. Gabby is a natural born showman and a crowd pleaser. The Cub fans go strongly for his perpetual smile and his hustle.

It is quite a tribute to McCarthy's managerial skill that the Cubs are riding on the heels of the Brooklyn team. The Bruin pitching has been very spotty and is improving only a little. Guy Bush is pitching well and Perce Malone has been quite consistent since the weather grew warm. But Charlie Root and Fred Blake have fallen short of expectations. To counteract some of the pitching weaknesses, McCarthy has juggled his staff with the skill of a chess master.

When Hornsby was injured, McCarthy rigged up a capable infield with none too brilliant material. He shifted Woodie English, a corking good shortstop, to third base and the youngster is right at home there. Clyde Back moved in at short and Shocks Blair was put in Hornsby's shoes. Neither Beck nor Blair are rated as stars but there's nothing wrong with their fielding and the Cubs can spare a little batting for defense.

It can be said for the Cubs they never wavered in the face of their many misfortunes. Every one of them hustles all the time and plays out the string. That is the spirit Joe McCarthy inspires and if the Cubs come busting along and win the pennant again, a lot of the credit can be given the Buffalo Irishman as well as the bats of Wilson, Cuyler and Hartnett.

GREENVILLE WINS FROM MENASHA IN 12 INNINGS

Greenville Grange and West Menasha battled in a 12 inning game at Greenville Sunday, the decision finally going to Greenville 5 and 4 just as the clock was ticking along toward 6 o'clock. The game was featured by a home run when the ball was lost in the barley field on which the diamond is located and a row that started over umpires and threatened the game. After much arguing play was resumed with a new umpire.

Menasha counted its tallies in the first and second innings, one run in each, and then scored twice in the fourth. Greenville went scoreless until Thorson hit a home run into the barley field. The remaining Greenville scores came in the fifth with two more in the seventh. Greenville then counted the winning run in the twelfth. The teams are members of the

A. A. OWNERS MEET IN CHICAGO; PLAN TO SPLIT SEASON

Only Louisville Opposed to Starting Over Again on July 7

CHICAGO — (P) — Interest in American association baseball fortunes today lifted from the playing fields to a room in a Chicago hotel where club owners of the circuit went into a huddle with President Thomas J. Hickey to consider a split season.

An unofficial canvass of the owners showed that seven out of eight were in favor of splitting the championship season, the sole opposing owner being W. F. Knebelkamp of the league leading Louisville Colonels. His opposition was natural as the Colonels have such a wide margin in the current race that he does not like to risk loss of the second half and a chance to represent the American association in the annual "little world series."

If the split season is voted, the second half will open July 7. President Hickey said he believed no new schedule would be framed for the second season, if voted, July 7 marks the halfway mark of the full season's schedule and the teams would play it out although starting from scratch in the won and lost column. All double headers of the first half would automatically be dropped so as to give all teams an equal schedule.

The player limit would not be affected, Hickey said. Night baseball probably will come in for discussion today. President Hickey is a keen enthusiast for nocturnal games since he viewed those at Indianapolis.

Meanwhile battles continued along four fronts yesterday. St. Paul won its fifth straight by defeating Indianapolis, 7 to 6, and cut Louisville's lead to five and one-half games. Louisville, fell before Minneapolis in a slugging duel, 11 to 8. Milwaukee pounded Wyckoff and Wysonog for 16 hits while Dennis Gearin pitched excellently and trimmed Columbus, 7 to 2. Eddie Pick, drove a ball 400 feet for a home run over the right field fence with two men on base to give Kansas City an 8 to 5 victory over Toledo.

RADIO OPERATORS CO-OPERATE TO FORM NATION-WIDE CHAIN

"S O S" Organization to Aid
Red Cross Activities in All Disasters

BY ROBERT MACK

Copyright, 1930, by the Cons. Press
Washington — (CPA) — "Minute men" of the twentieth century, 2,300 individuals in the United States skilled in the art of radio communication have organized.

A nationwide "SOS" organization, which on a moment's notice is primed to set up emergency communication in time of disaster, and when all other modes of communication usually are wiped out, has been set up. The Navy and the Red Cross are the collaborating organizations which caused the creation of this radio chain, with the radio operators and individuals who are members of the Naval Communications Reserve.

Catastrophes of the past have evidenced the value of the radio amateur as the communications link. The new organization sets up on a permanent basis a network of Naval Reserve radio stations crisscrossing the country, and working through the commanding officers of the various naval districts with the Red Cross itself, the great national relief agency. Already the organization has been operative on an experimental basis, with periodic drills scheduled to fit the personnel for any national emergency, as well as to keep them trained in the event of war when they would be enrolled in the regular naval service.

Announcement of the creation of the SOS organization is made jointly by the Navy and the Red Cross, following conferences with this end in view. According to the plans, messages will be flashed from Reservists in the area in which a disaster has occurred through master control stations of the Navy to Red Cross branch headquarters or to the nearest of the 3,500 Red Cross local chapters.

In an emergency, the first SOS to be sent out by a station will report the type and location of the disaster and as much additional information as is immediately available. The second message to be sent will include the number of dead injured, temporarily homeless, houses destroyed and damaged, and the number of families affected. With this information available to the Red Cross, relief measures can be speedily organized. General emergency communication traffic will be handled, but personal messages will not be sent until official traffic has been cleared.

For emergency communication, two plans are provided under the organization, conforming to "types of disasters, which are classified as "predictable" and "unpredictable."

In the first category are listed general floods, usually resulting from heavy rains or melting snows, and hurricanes, whose centers can be located and probable course predicted in advance. The necessary advance arrangements for the network communications therefore can be made through the commandant of the particular Naval District involved so that they may man the reserve stations of that district.

"Unpredictable" disasters, like fire, earthquake, tornado, severe storms, bursting dams, landslides, volcanic eruptions and explosions, usually of a local character, are the most difficult to prepare for, since no specific preparation can be made. Instructions for handling such disaster communications are directed to "any naval reservist in the area of the catastrophe, and prescribe the channels upon which they should attempt to route SOS messages.

Most of the naval reservists that constitute this new SOS organization are radio amateurs, who are in radio "for the fun of it," but who are its real pioneers.

HUGE ESTATE TAXES BUILD BRITISH WEALTH

London — (P) — Redistribution of Great Britain's wealth through taxes on huge estates is going on in a big way.

The income of Ramsay MacDonald's government from death duties this year seems likely to establish a new record.

Since April 1 nearly $90,000,000 has poured into the British treasury from this source. That is well above Chancellor Snowden's estimate of $410,000,000 for the year.

This figure is the more remarkable because three huge estates have not been formally proved. They will yield at least another $75,000,000.

It is, for example, estimated that approximately $50,000,000 will be derived from the late Lord Ashton's fortune, while the estate of Lord Dewar and Major Andrew Coats will yield about $10,000,000 and $5,000,000 respectively. The Dewar money came from whisky and the Coats riches from cotton thread.

For the financial year 1929-30 Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer in the conservative cabinet, estimated that $405,000,000 would be derived from death duties.

The actual yield was $498,350,000. This amount included $10,575,000 from the estate of Mr. Bernhard Revelstoke and $2,729,600 from that of Lord Rosebery.

PLYWOOD TEAM LEADS LEAGUE

Easily Defeated Bordens 13 to 8—Good Support Quells Heavy Hitting

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—The Plywood team still remained on top of the softball league after their game on Monday night with Bordens, in which they defeated the latter easily, 13 to 8. Although Barlow of the winners was hit hard by team mates, game was well supported. In another game Hattens lost out to the Hamilton team when the Hamilton slugging got too much for the lumber men. Crispy team traveled to Manawa on Monday night and received a 10-4 trouncing.

On Wednesday evening, in the league games, the Legion will play Bordens; Libsons will meet Hamilton, while the Plywoods will try to wipe out a defeat handed them earlier by Crispy. On Thursday evening, Clintonville All-Stars will meet Bordens here and on the same field the Plywoods will play the Bear Creek team.

Forest Junction—A frame barn on the F. G. Haese farm with a frame stable and machine shed attached at one end were burned to the ground when struck by lightning during a thunder storm about 9:30 Sunday morning. "I had little or no appetite and what I forced myself to eat caused pain and misery. I was restless and unable to sleep. Constipation caused my system to become filled with poisons and I was miserable all the time. I tried a good many medicines but none of them gave me more than temporary relief."

"A friend praised Konjola so highly that I gave this medicine a trial. Almost immediately my food began to digest better and my bowel action became more natural. I could feel myself gaining strength. Today, after taking four bottles, I feel better than I have for years. Our home will never be without Konjola and I wish others to know what this medicine did for me."

Konjola is that kind of a medicine, quick and thorough. It is at its best in stubborn cases and even infants can take it. From six to eight bottles are recommended as a complete treatment. Konjola is sold in Appleton, Wis., at Schintz Bros. Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

BILL TO PROTECT WORK OF CREATORS WILL BE OPPOSED

Authors, Composers and Musicians Alarmed Over Sudden Opposition

BY LEMUEL F. PARTON
Copyright 1930 by Cons. Press
New York — Authors, composers, artists, musicians and designers, leagued in support of the two bills to protect creative work in America, are alarmed over the sudden and unexpected opposition which the bills are now encountering in congress.

The attack on the authors' copyright bill by Representative Bussey of Arizona is expected to be followed today by a rallying of New York supporters of both bills for a trip to Washington to defend the two measures, submitted by Representative Albert Vercell of Indiana. One bill is designed to protect authors, musicians, artists and composers and the other is to protect designers of clothes or fabrics and workers in the decorative arts.

These two measures, with little public excitement, attend no progress through house committees, have mobilized the social creative wing of American craftsmen in what its members believe to be a crucial battle.

WOULD RETARD U. S.
The loss of the fight, they say, would seriously retard America's advance in world trade because its style designers, unlike those of France or England, have no protection for their work.

"Paris has led in setting styles for the rest of the world," said Miss Mary Bandelari, "because the French law automatically gives a designer the protection which an author receives in a copyright. That enables France not only to keep her best designers, but to attract many of the best designers of other nations."

Miss Bandelari is a young New York girl who made herself the champion of the shoe world by designing and manufacturing shoes for the elite of the world. Many of her best designs have been brought out in Paris, as she could obtain no protection for them in America.

"As a member of a special committee of the American Association of Decorative Arts and Crafts, I have appeared before the house committee on patents, and during the few days left I intend to see every person I can find and do the utmost in my power to drive through these bills," said Miss Bandelari today.

MANY AMERICANS
But one-tenth of the successful designers of Paris are Americans. They are exiles, helping build up the supremacy of another nation in the style world because their own country leaves their work open to theft. Any person who cannot see what it means to hamstring the creative artist, just at the moment when America piles up a great economic surplus and must shove out into the world in keen competition with every other nation, seems to me to be extremely dense.

"We have about 100 first class designers in America, such as Lee Summers, Virginia Hamilton and Lucien Bernard. With proper legislation, we could have a few more, many more. America has plenty of talent constantly emerging, but it cannot flourish because of the lack of the ordinary police provisions safeguarding property in creative work."

"Just now the ships are loaded with women going to Paris to spend, collectively, a vast fortune buying gowns. It is the names of Patou, Worth and Lanvin and all the other great couturiers which have given Paris this glamor in the clothes world. These names never could have been built up had the best work of these designers been left open to theft."

Sarto S. Balliet wishes to announce that he has opened law offices with John Morgan, First National Bank Building.

STATE PIG CROP SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Corn Belt and Nation Figures Show Decrease in Spite of Wisconsin Growth

Madison—The favorable spring weather is attributed to the increase in Wisconsin's spring pig crop this year, according to the Wisconsin and United States Department of Agriculture here.

Despite a decrease in the number of brood sows since last year, the average per litter as reported in June was 6.5 pigs as compared with 6.4 last year and 6.3 two years ago.

While the crop in Wisconsin shows an increase, that of the corn belt as a whole shows a decline of 2.9 per cent and for the country as a whole a reduction of 5.7 per cent, the department said.

In number of sows farrowing Wisconsin shows a reduction of 1.2 per cent as compared with a decline of the corn belt 7.1 per cent and of the United States a 10.7 per cent.

"That Wisconsin's swine industry is on the increase is further shown by the fact that the number of sows bred or to be bred to farrow next year is about one fourth larger than the number farrowed in the last year, the department said. For the corn belt the increase is 1.5 per cent and for the United States as a whole 13.2 per cent."

Wisconsin's swine population at the beginning of the present year was at a low point, the department said, being estimated at 1,700,000 as compared with 1,800,000 a year ago.

TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS OF INSIDE OF STOMACH

Success of an American in photographing the interior of the stomach has raised enormous interest in medical circles here.

William Paul Aschner of the Samar hospital in New York developed this photography. It was with a tiny camera made to be used, devised by Back of V.

Aschner gave results of 21 photographs of stomach lesions. They showed 1,682,000. The trend of the disease in the state this year in fact that a definite increase in the number of cases in Wisconsin has been looked for during the year.

For the United States as a whole, the trend is still downward, but the present summer, but in the large number of sows bred farrowing next fall, an upward prospect during the late months of the present year."

These "diving" balls prove that this new motor oil will not thin out...

Just a turn of the hand and you make for yourself one of the most interesting experiments ever made with motor oil. Ask any Standard Oil Service Station attendant to show you the "ball and bottle test".

WHAT HAPPENS in this experiment is very simple. As you turn the bottles upside down, the little metal balls "dive" through the oil to the bottom of each bottle. The heavier the oil the more slowly the ball drops. In oil that is thinned out, the balls fall very quickly.

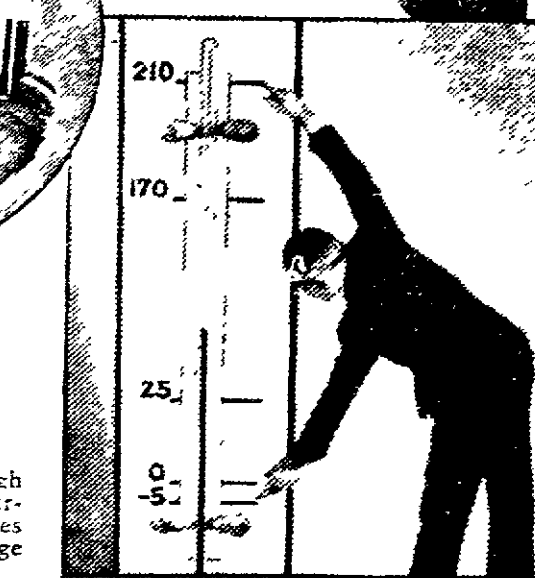

Watch the bottle containing New Iso-Vis that has gone many hundreds of miles in the crankcase. You will see that it actually is as heavy as the fresh oil. New Iso-Vis is the only motor oil that will not thin out in the crankcase of your car.

But New Iso-Vis does more than end the danger caused by oil "thinning out". It lubricates better at extremes of temperature, and deposits far less carbon. Actual tests show that New Iso-Vis leaves a carbon deposit 50% less than the average deposit of the better grade oils tested.

New Iso-Vis is now on sale at all Standard Oil dealers and service stations.

THE SMALL carbon deposit of New Iso-Vis, at the left, is compared here with that of a popular premium-priced motor oil. Consider the saving in time, trouble and money that New Iso-Vis will bring you.

SOME OILS are satisfactory at high temperatures, others at low temperatures. But New Iso-Vis lubricates correctly over the complete range of engine temperatures.

YOU CAN STOP BUT CAN YOU STOP in time--

The difference between dependable and faulty brakes is a very slight margin... so is the difference between safety and a serious accident. When thoroughly efficient and reliable brake testing service, such as ours, is so economically available, why take unnecessary chances? You'll enjoy your driving a great deal more when you know your brakes ARE dependable.

JACQUELINE ON HER OWN

by RICHARD STARR

SYNOPSIS: At 19, Jacqueline Grey's natural gifts—her trim figure, and alluring beauty—had raised her to a position as a model as Byram's, great London establishment. As the story opens she rejects with thanks, a proposal that she become Mrs. William Brown, wife of the drapery salesman. She intends to have her fling before marrying. A kindly act, taking Old Dobbin, aged peddler, home, brings both misfortune and good luck. She finds the Byram's dormitory locked when she returns. Policeman Rogers helps her get in undetected and takes her bet on Prinkipo, a 100-1 shot in a race. Keswick Dell, buyer at Byram's, presses his suit. Jacqueline rejects it and is discharged for her tardiness. Seven days of adversity follow—Prinkipo loses; no job is found. Then Solicitor Rustum tells her she has inherited 530 pounds from James Booker—known to her as Old Dobbin.

Chapter 5
THE RICH MISS GREY
T he bumpy road Jacqueline had traveled to her sudden state of affluence had given her no acquaintance with banks but its intricacies were explained by the manager. She was impressed by his courtesy and consideration. She signed her name in a big book and received a check-book and the manager explained its mysteries. Jacqueline marveled at the mighty power of the check-book. She still was a little bit doubtful. She voiced her thought. "But supposing I wanted a lot—40 or 50 pounds; would they have it now? I mean without having to send out for it?" she added. "Yes," replied the manager with out smiling. "I think the bank is equal even to such a strain as that. But do you want so much? It is rather a lot of money to carry about with you." Jacqueline explained. "For a holiday, you see; and as I should be away some weeks, I should want rather a lot of money." "No need to carry money about with you," the manager returned. "That is the use of a check-book. Pay your bills by check and if you want cash send us a check and we will send treasury notes by registered post."

Jacqueline thanked the manager and with five pounds in her purse walked out. A young man smiled at her. She stared him down coldly. "Check," she murmured. "A fortune hunter no doubt." Jacqueline went home. Home was an attic room in the less select part of Pimlico. It was about 8 feet by 10, and here Jacqueline had lived since her retreat from Byram's. The ceiling sloped down to meet the bed. Jacqueline had a habit of opening her eyes and sitting bolt upright with one movement. It was an attribute of extreme youth, but it was not suitable to Mrs. Hubbard's attic room. Also Jacqueline's morning course of physical exercises, which she had always indulged in at Byram's to the scorn of Emily Gibbs, was somewhat circumscribed. Apart from the limitations of the ceiling, the floor was bare boards, set out with geometrical patterns in tin tacks, only half driven in and painful to be on. "But never mind," said Jacqueline, as the dingy house came in sight. "Mrs. Hubbard and that room will soon be a memory of the unimportant past. The thing that never happens has happened."

Mrs. Hubbard admitted her. She was a large woman with about the same amount of expression as a door. There was nothing indefinable about Mrs. Hubbard's personal atmosphere. It was gin and cloves. At odd times during the week Mrs. Hubbard was disposed to be friendly with her lodgers; but on Saturday evenings her motto was—"Business is Business."

This was Monday. Jacqueline's bill was unpaid. Now the girl produced a little bundle of treasury notes and peeled one off the top, handing it to the landlady. Mrs. Hubbard's expression softened momentarily. Jacqueline began to experience the thrill of power which wealth brings. "Praps you would like the first-floor front, my dear?" suggested Mrs. Hubbard. "It'll be empty week after next. There's a sunny aspect in the afternoon between 3 and 5; and the bed's chainspring with an overlay of pure horsehair—first husband's gift." Mrs. Hubbard sniffed. "The carpet's hamster."

"I'll let you know later on, Mrs. Hubbard," said Jacqueline. "You can call me mother, if you like, dear. Most of my lodgers call me mother. They feel fond of me and it sounds homey."

Jacqueline fled upstairs. "If only she would stick to gin or to cloves," she murmured. "It's the combination that beats me."

In the attic she sat down and regarded herself in the mirror. The glass was cracked diagonally, and Jacqueline's little face looked as if it had been sliced in two and imperfectly joined up. She wagged her finger at this distortion of reflection. "Now, look here, Miss Grey, you be careful. You're a rich woman now, and you've got to keep your head. Don't let it get swelled. Just take yourself in hand and don't think you're everbody just because you've got a check-book."

Alto, don't go persuading yourself that you cut any ice in the way of pretenses, as the Americans put it; because if you do you'll be riding for a spill.

"There's one thing. This glass would take the conceit out of a 50,000-year screen beauty in about two peeps. Great heavens, child—your nose!"

She flew at the powder-puff and delicately touched up the offending feature. "Of course, it's an affliction," she murmured, "but it's yours, my dear, and you've got to make the best of it. Perhaps it's for your good too. When you're inclined to get a bit above yourself, always remember your nose. It will keep you in your place."

You're going among the real people now, my dear, and you've got to watch your step. You've got to snare them that little Jacqueline can't use as good as any of them. If you don't I shall be ashamed of you for ever, and I shall take no further interest in you.

"You ought to be able to carry it off. You've got a few things in your favor if you haven't got looks. You've got money, and that's a good start. You know how to buy your frocks, how to put them on, and how to walk in them when you've got them on—which is what every girl doesn't know. Keswick Dell taught you that, fat and 50 as he is so give him his due. That will carry you a long way, but not all the way. You want a little education—not too much, and a lot of intelligence. The point is have you got enough? The rest you will have to pick up as you go along."

STORM LOSSES IN BROWN - CO AVERAGE $3,000

Farmers Plan to Re-build as Soon as Adjustment Can Be Made

Green Bay — In the path of the Sunday night cyclone through Brown-co, the yards, fields and highways in some places are strewn with roofing, shingles, splintered boards and timbers of the destroyed barns. In some cases barn roofs were thrown against houses and flying timbers penetrated the walls. Some farmers having no stables of their own left on their farms and are compelled to milk their cows in the stables of neighbors. The losses range from $1,500 to $3,000 with the average about $3,000. If 200 barns were destroyed the losses are in the neighborhood of $600,000. On some highways the destruction was almost complete. On one the town line road between Denmark and Glenmore only two barns were left standing and on the Glenmore road very few barns escaped destruction. Rebuilding operations will begin as soon as insurance adjustments are made and can payments can be engaged. Help will be scarce as farmers are buying and harvesting will soon begin.

FEEL GRANTSBURG TOLL BRIDGE RATES EXCESSIVE

Grantsburg — (P) — Today marked the first anniversary of the construction of the toll bridge across the St. Croix river between Grantsburg and Pine City, Minn. Those who looked forward to the establishment of a bridge between the two cities have begun to question its value, now that it has been in operation a year. Completion of the structure was hailed with much enthusiasm as an end to short-cut for cross-country travelers. The bridge connects highway 70 of Wisconsin and Minnesota's 9, both of which roads traverse the width of their respective states. The start of the second year of operation finds Grantsburg citizens amassing for an attack on the toll. When the bridge was under construction, it was said about tolls, but now residents declare them to be excessive. Not only residents of Grantsburg and Pine City but also transient travelers are objecting to what are termed "hold up" toll prices. Citizens of Grantsburg are concerned about the bridge tolls. They point out that this section of the state is "via Grantsburg" and that travelers deduce that the city is the bridge. Grantsburg residents declare that travelers and tourists are urged to shunt this city from their route because of the excessive charges. The controlling stock in the bridge is owned by Minnesota residents. Grantsburg citizens have made tentative plans to appeal for a toll cut to state officials.

Woodbury of New York, Dr. Wilson will be required to assume leadership of their classes, as well as his own. The Life of Christ and Home Missions will be the subjects discussed in his classes. Among the 200 young people who will attend the conference, are five Appleton boys and girls, Leonard Burhans, Jeanette Hughes, Ruth Lutz, Jerome Watts and Gail Hayes.

Old Rivals Meet In Annual Balloon Race On July 4

Houston, Tex. — (P) — Old rivals will again meet in the 1930 national championship balloon race to start July 4 from Houston. Eight of the 15 contenders are veterans of former races. Nine civilian bags will be pitted against six military contenders and the army and navy will be evenly divided for premier service honors with three balloons each. Two of the navy balloons will be piloted by men who were partners in winning the race last year. Lieut. W. G. Settle and Lieut. W. E. Bushnell, who set a world's distance record of 532 miles to place first in 1929, will stage an inter-navy race of their own. Bushnell was Settle's aide last year. All 15 contenders will seek the American championship and the first three place winners will be designated by the National Aeronautic association as the team to represent the United States in the international Gordon Bennett race September 1 in Cleveland. A familiar figure of past years, Ward T. Van Orman, will be missing. With Alan MacCracken as aide he won the international trophy last year. The two automatically are qualified for the September classic as defenders. One of the oldest teams will be composed of Edward J. Hill and Arthur G. Schlosser, aide, an entrant of the Detroit balloon club, who won the Gordon Bennett race in 1927 and were entrants in 1928 and 1929. The three navy entrants and their aides are Lieutenant Bushnell and Lieut. J. A. Greenwald; Lieut. R. P. Bennett and Lieut. C. F. Miller; and Lieutenant Settle and Lieut. R. G. Mayer. Army balloons will be manned by Capt. Karl S. Axtator and Lieut.

Germans Continue Wild Celebration Over Liberation Of Their Fatherland

Berlin — (P) — Sixty million Germans continued today to express their joy at the liberation of the Rhineland. With the exception of a few isolated cases celebration of yesterday's evacuation by the French was without disorders. Breslau Fascists supplied a note of discord when during a military tattoo which formed one of the jubilation features, they started street rows. A number of persons were injured and other arrested. Kaiserslautern witnessed a severe clash in which Republicans invaded homes of former separatists and wrecked their possessions, being expelled by streams from fire hose. A separatist was said to have shot himself later. Gaiety, however, was the dominant note of the celebrations. All over Germany church bells rang at noon today, as they had changed their claxon of release at midnight. In Berlin and elsewhere the stock exchanges suspended business 15 minutes today while the members were addressed by committee chairmen. The capital was bedecked with bunting which floated even from the street cars. There were Republican pennants upon many private houses, with a striking display of the old imperial colors. Others compromised on the severe black and white ensign of Prussia. Special children's festivities were arranged in all schools. Military services were held in both Protestant and Catholic garrison churches. A battery of four field pieces fired a salute of 21 guns in the Lustgarten, the first time a salute had been fired there since Jan. 27, 1914, the Kaiser's birthday, when 101 guns were fired. A review of the Berlin garrison on the Moabit drill ground followed. There was a pilgrimage today to the grave of the late Chancellor Stresemann when wreaths from all parts of the country, which arrived this forenoon, were placed on or near his last resting place while the police formed a cordon to hold back the great crowds. A bust of Dr.

Stresemann in the Reichstag building today was unveiled by Foreign Minister Curtius. The celebration in the night had been staged under ideal conditions. The summer night was starry and beacons blazed on the heights of Tannus and Elbel and up and down the Rhine while the church bells pealed their anthems of thanksgiving throughout the liberated territory. A proclamation by President von Hindenburg said: "After years of bitter distress, after the acceptance of oppressive burdens, we have regained for the Rhineland a freedom that we shall preserve for the welfare and future of our Fatherland. "Therefore, in this solemn hour let us be united in the pledge: Deutschland ueber alles."

CHALLENGER YIELDS TO THREAT OF BRISK WINDS

Gourack, Scotland — (P) — The Shamrock V, which started in a 42-mile race on the Clyde today, gave up after about a half hour's sailing. The White Heather followed suit when her struts gave way. The Shamrock V stopped from "safety first" policy. The wind was fresh in the channel and Captain Heard decided to take no risks of damage to Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's cup. Captain Heard explained that the Shamrock is leaving the Clyde this weekend for Gosport to prepare for her voyage to America and the time is so short that he could not afford to run risks of mishaps that might delay the trip.

LOW DELIVERIES ON JULY CONTRACT BOOSTS WHEAT PRICE

Exporters Are Outbidding Chicago Market for Kansas Wheat Crop

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor
Chicago (P)—Wheat prices advanced sharply today owing a good deal to the fact that deliveries here on July contracts were less than looked for. Besides, there was evidence that exporters were outbidding Chicago for Kansas wheat, and that no considerable addition to the stock of wheat here is likely to result.

from the present movement of new wheat southwest. The total amount of wheat delivered in Chicago today to fill July contracts was only 1,150,000 bu, and the extent of hedging pressure here from the southwest proved to be negligible.

Supplementing the bullish effect today of statements from the Federal Farm board that there is every reason to hope for a better average price than now prevails for wheat was talk current that export business yesterday had been of substantial volume, with indications of further purchases overnight for Europe.

ore. Predictions were also heard that premiums for wheat the Gulf of Mexico would be unusually high, but unless offerings for export became larger. Meanwhile, rains reported today in various sections of the harvest district Southwest tended also to lift the market here.

Friends of higher prices for wheat late in the season today on assertions that bottom level of wheat are seldom discovered by the majority of traders until after sharp rallies have taken place. It was pointed out too that July is normally a month of unusual crop hazards, and that it is a fair sample the condition of the domestic spring wheat crop on an average 30 days or more of delay under such circumstances, selling pressure here on wheat future deliveries was surprisingly small today, especially from sources southwest.

STATE INTEREST CENTERS AROUND GOVERNOR CONTEST

LaFollette Plans to Enter Campaign on Chain Sys- tem, Utility Rates

BY EWALD L. ALMEN
Madison—Philip LaFollette, by virtue of the announcement of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor, shared the spotlight of public interest in events of the state capital during the past week.

Long awaited, the announcement came Thursday that the younger son of the late Sen. Robert M. LaFollette would play a hand in this year's political game with the chief executive's chair as the stake. The announcement said chain systems, notably banking and retailing, the corrupt practices act and utility rates would be the major issues. Coupled with his announcement, LaFollette assailed the present administration, sought to show where it had broken pledges.

LaFollette's entrance into the state political field completed the roster of candidates for the three main political factions in the state. Opposing the younger LaFollette will be Gov. Walter Kohler who has been instrumental in establishing a Conservative-Republican boom in Wisconsin after many years of control by Progressives. In the Democrat's camp are three candidates waiting for a chance to whip the Republican nominee. Charles Hammesley, Shorewood; Leon P. Fox of Chilton or Prof. L. J. Chasse of De Pere will carry the Democrat banner at the regular election.

While LaFollette completed the Progressive-Republican slate, the contest over the attorney generalship is yet to be smoothed out. Since the middle of April the names of two Progressives have been on the ticket. Attorney General John Reynolds, defeated in the supreme court election April 1, became a candidate for reelection soon afterwards. Alvin Reis, Madison attorney and Progressive floor leader in the assembly, had announced his candidacy some weeks before. To date neither have given indications of withdrawing.

At Baldwin, Wis., Gov. Kohler stressed the necessity of reforestation and urged economy of natural resources. At Appleton, speaking before the United Spanish War Veterans of Wisconsin, the governor spoke of the necessity of foresight in connection with national defenses. At Chicago, the governor and Mrs. Kohler, accompanied by officers of the Wisconsin National Guard, attended the military tournament of the Sixth Corps area. On his return the governor expressed himself as "inspired with an increased respect of our Army and Navy."

In supreme court during the week, the Wisconsin Real Estate Brokers board found itself rebuked for the methods employed in denying licenses to Texas land operators. The court reopened the case started by the Progress Development company of Texas against the board for the latter's refusal to grant a license. Under the court's order, the board must again review the facts in the case and then make a determination "in accordance with the law."

While Texas was battling Wisconsin in the courts, a delegation of Wisconsin business men appointed by Gov. Kohler was visiting the disputed citrus fruit lands in Texas. The end of the rift over the value of the lands was foreseen in the signing of a consultative pact advocating establishment of a "reliable" source of information to which state regulatory bodies might turn for information.

In a lengthy opinion, the supreme court explained its decision restraining a circuit court from enforcing an immediate ouster trial on behalf of Lieut. Gov. Henry Huber. Accused as a probable violator of the corrupt practices act, Huber has sought an early trial but was rebuffed when the supreme court held that a circuit court had no right to force the filing of a complaint and the service of a summons. State's attorneys, appointed by Gov. Kohler, have not yet filed a complaint, and under the supreme court's ruling, have until the expiration of Huber's term in which to do so.

Meanwhile, state's counsel obtained certified copies of all financial reports filed with the secretary of state by Progressive-Republican candidates for state office during the 1928 campaign. This action was believed to be a preliminary to the ouster trial of Lieut. Gov. Huber. Similar suits are pending against Attorney General Reynolds and Secretary of State Theodore Damman.

How To Shop

By William H. Steinhilber

The shopper should know something about tiles because they are now being used in the bath room, kitchen, fireplace, basement and miscellaneous rooms.

Tiles should present a smooth surface; they should not be shipped or contain spots, unless spots are purposely included in the design for effect. In white tiles, the color should be fairly uniform, but in color tiles a variation in shade in each tile is desirable. By securing first grade tiles—several grades are sold—the shopper not only gets a product free from defects but also insures a better grade of workmanship in the laying of the tiles.

Workmanship is important. The finished surface must be absolutely smooth. See that the job is left absolutely clean; some workmen, if not particular, may leave traces of cement on the tile. In an installation where design is a factor, all units should be part of the design, and there should be no misplaced tiles.

SELECTIVE LUMBERING WILL SAVE INDUSTRY

Madison—(AP)—Forests that last indefinitely and saw mills saving up there forests without ever running out of logs are pictured by the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, in reporting the results of a study of selective logging in the northern hardwoods of the Lake States.

The key to perpetual timber production in the opinion of the Forest Service is selective logging, which means a partial cutting of the forests involving judicious selection of trees to be felled, so as to perpetuate and improve the forest and at the same time maintain or increase the profit.

Lumbermen in the Lake States with no virgin timber in prospect for cutting after present holdings are exhausted, must choose between going out of business in a comparatively short time or taking steps to put their remaining stands on a self-perpetuating basis, the Forest Service believes.

KIWANIS CLUB HOLDS BUSINESS MEETING

Members of the Kiwanis club will hold a business meeting at their Wednesday noon luncheon at the Conway hotel. Routine business will be transacted and the general affairs of the club discussed.

RESERVE BANK FIGURES BETTER THAN YEAR AGO

Madison—(AP)—Debit figures collected by the Federal Reserve banks from 19 Wisconsin cities show a decline of 7.5 per cent. Milwaukee, however, was not the only city to make a favorable May report. Green Bay reported an increase of 6 per cent and Hudson a gain of 21.3 per cent over May, 1929.

The statistics were presented in the Wisconsin Retail bulletin, monthly publication of the extension division and the school of commerce of the University of Wisconsin.

Although the figures show a 12.2 per cent increase in business, the bulletin warns that "this large increase should be interpreted with care." It was caused mainly by the large increase of more than $44,000,000 in Milwaukee checking transactions.

ELK OFFICERS HOLD BUSINESS MEETING

Elk officers and committee chairman will hold a business meeting Wednesday evening at the Elk club. The meeting will begin with a dinner at 6:15, according to Mark E. Halset, secretary. Routine business matters will be discussed, Mr. Halset said. The club is not holding general meetings during the summer.

15.7 per cent over April when judged by the activities at public employment offices, the bulletin said. As compared with May, 1929, however, conditions in May, 1930 were 24.4 per cent less favorable.
